ISSUES ORDERS TO THE MILITIA

Governor Walton to Stop Legislators At All Costs.

MILITARY FORCES INCREASED

Oklahoma's Chief Executive Also Orders All Citizens Between 21 and 45 to Hold Themselves in Readiness For Service—Klan Leader Intimates He Will Bring Suit For Alleged Criminal and Civil Libel.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Sept. 25.—Governor Walton, facing the crisis of his career tomorrow, has ordered Adjutant General Baird H. Markham, commander of the Oklahoma national guard, to "use all the military forces of the state—all force of arms necessary"—to prevent the legislative quorum of the house of representatives meeting, in accordance with its avowed plan.

The governor commanded all citizens between the ages of 21 and 45 to hold themselves in readiness for service. His official order to the military left no further chance to doubt that he means to stop the "rebel legislators" at all costs, even that of statewide violence and bloodshed, if it should come to that extreme.

The governor reiterates that the Ku Klux Klan "was declared to be an enemy of the sovereign state of Oklahoma," and refers to evidence of his military court of inquiry as purporting to show that "it has taken over the political government in many cities and counties." Murders, floggings and other outrages are again charged to the klan as an organization.

In a supplemental statement to newspaper correspondents, the governor added that the troops would be ordered to shoot to kill, if necessary, to halt the legislators in their determination to assemble against his edict.

The grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan N. C. Jewett, struck back and announced plans for a counter attack on the governor and his court of military inquiry.

Aroused by his arrest on a charge of rioting and flogging, Jewett, supreme klansman of the realm of Oklahoma, declared that he would use the same guns against his enemies as they have trained on him.

That he contemplates bringing both criminal and civil libel proceedings against the governor, Dr. A. A. Maupin, who testified against him at the court of military inquiry, "and others who have defamed my character," was his direct intimation. "I shall insist upon full vindication of my character," Jewett asserted.

There was some doubt in the minds of a number today as to whether the "lawless legislators"—as Walton calls them—will be able to muster a quorum in the capitol tomorrow. W. D. McBee, acknowledged leader of the impeachment movement, would not claim more than fifty members of the house were in the city. Fifty-four members are required for a majority, McBee did claim, however, that there would be eighty here when the time arrives for them to go over the hill to the capitol.

Military occupation of the city is to be increased and extended, Governor Walton announced. Mobilization of a considerable number of additional troops has already been ordered in the armories of other cities and the troops will entrain for the capital.

Republican members of the Oklahoma senate agreed that they "would keep hands off" the gubernatorial-legislative war here until assured of the legality of the called meeting of the house of representatives. The senate is composed of 12 Republicans and 33 Democrats.

CAPITULATION ANNOUNCED

German Government Signs Proclamation of Surrender.

PASSIVE RESISTANCE ENDED

Extraordinary Measures Taken All Along the Line to Cope With Any Uprising—Troops Shunted to Points of Vantage and Police Held in Readiness For Any Alarm—Concessions Expected From France.

Berlin, Sept. 25.—Germany has capitulated.

Following extraordinary sessions of the cabinet, mixed with various conferences of officials, industrialists, laborers, bankers and political party leaders, the government signed the proclamation of unconditional surrender.

Under the proclamation the passive resistance in the Ruhr is ordered abandoned without conditions attached, although the government expects concessions from the French in the Ruhr and Rhineland, including resumption of German administration, the release of prisoners and the return of all deported Germans.

The imminence of German surrender has kept the tension at a high pitch. The danger of a "putsch" seemed so real that extraordinary measures to cope with any uprising were taken all along the line.

The minister of defense sent the Bavarian reichswehr contingent (the national guard) to Wurtemberg; ordered the Wurtemberg contingent to Saxony, and sent the Saxon troops to Bavaria. The government believes these locations will break up whatever connections may exist between certain reichswehr formations and secret organizations.

The Saxon contingent, which is regarded as the most dependable for the republic, has been concentrated at Grafenwoerth, and Commander-in-Chief Von Seeckt has assured Chancellor Stresemann that the reichswehr will be able to crush any "putsch" either from the right or left.

The Berlin police are held in readiness for any alarm.

Among the important conferences was one occupying many hours in which the cabinet met with representatives of the occupied territory. Hugo Linnies was among those present.

The Stresemann ministry has put it squarely up to Germany's enemies to save her from annihilation for their own profit. Berlin faces the imperialism of Bavaria, and behind its back is the growing menace of the red revolution of despair. Both these anti-Berlin forces have been talking in defiant tones, particularly during the last few days, when Herr Stresemann was preparing the way for his decree putting an end to passive resistance.

No assurance is felt that even the people of the Ruhr will pay any great attention to the Berlin decree. They have no affection for the Berlin government, and they have learned to hate the French more than ever. Although Berlin has surrendered, it yet remains for France to make the Ruhr seizure a profitable economic venture.

COOLIDGE EXTOLLS WORK OF RED CROSS

Holds Charity the Greatest Moral Force in the World.

Washington, Sept. 25.—President Coolidge, speaking before the annual national convention of the American Red Cross here, declared that charity, such as that distributed by the Red Cross, represents the greatest moral force in the world.

The president added that civilization has not yet reached the state where police, criminal courts and armed forces can be dispensed with. President Coolidge spoke for ten minutes, reviewing the achievements of the Red Cross in alleviating suffering. He summed up with this tribute: "I respect it for what it has done and what it is. I am mindful that its purpose and its origin had its beginnings in the day of Abraham Lincoln. It is representative of the dominant influences of his time. It partakes of his spirit. It shows the way to a larger freedom. Our country, it is secure; no higher commendation, no greater place in history, than to have it correctly said that the Red Cross is truly American."

The executive spoke both as a citizen and president of the Red Cross. He formally called the convention to order. He said civilization is coming to rely more and more upon moral force, adding: "It is because the Red Cross has been a practical application of that principle, that it has been such a tremendous success. It makes its appeal for support directly to the conscience of mankind. It is the voluntary offering of the people themselves."

WHEELER WOULD FIX WHEAT PRICE

Program of "Liberal" Group Placed Before Coolidge.

RELIEF OF FARMERS SOUGHT

Montana Senator Announces That the "Liberal" Program For Legislation Includes Repeal of Esch-Cummins Transportation Act, Fixing Selling Price of Wheat and Recognition of Russia.

Washington, Sept. 25.—The "liberal" group, which will hold the balance of power in the next congress, took the initiative in the movement to force the administration into taking some action to relieve the distressful burdens of the American farmers.

The first step was the presentation of a formal demand to President Coolidge for the immediate summoning of congress in extra session to enact legislation for agricultural relief.

This demand was laid before the president by Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, who advised the president that congress should at once pass a measure fixing the price of wheat, and that immediate recognition should be extended to the existing government of Russia, thereby creating new markets for the farmers' products.

The second step taken by the group to bring about governmental intervention in the agricultural industry was the announcement by Senator Wheeler that a conference of all members of the group in both senate and house will be held here early in November to adopt a program for legislative action in the next congress. The call for the conference is being prepared. Of course, if an extra session of the congress is called the conference of the "liberals" will be called to meet at an earlier date.

Already three "planks" in the liberal program for legislation by congress have been agreed upon, Senator Wheeler said. They are: First, fixing the selling price of wheat; second, repeal of the Esch-Cummins transportation act; third, recognition of Russia.

Explaining these in order, Senator Wheeler pointed out that the government already has established precedents for the wheat price-fixing measure by the enactment of the Esch-Cummins law, which guaranteed a fixed return to the railroad companies upon their investments; also in the post-war adjustments with contractors, who were reimbursed for their outlay upon uncompleted projects.

"The government urged the farmers to plant all their acreage to wheat, just as it encouraged builders to devote their energies to putting up structures for housing various war activities," Senator Wheeler said. "The farmers never got anything for their trouble, but all the others did. Settlements were made by the government with contractors who found themselves with uncompleted jobs on their hands, while the farmers who had responded to the call for the planting of more wheat got nothing. All the government needs to do is to go out and buy one bushel of wheat. This will fix the price and the jobbers and middlemen will have to pay the same price for the wheat they get."

WANTS THE NAMES

District Attorney Calls Head of Stock Exchange Before Grand Jury.

New York, Sept. 25.—District Attorney Barton issued a subpoena calling upon Seymour L. Crowell, president of the New York stock exchange, to go before the grand jury to name the big politicians and public officers who, he says, tried to influence the exchange in favor of bucketshop operators. Mr. Barton's action came after he had read a speech delivered by Mr. Crowell before the convention of the American Bankers' association in Atlantic City. In his speech Mr. Crowell cited certain situations in which public officials had intervened in favor of bucketshop operators, and declared that henceforth full publicity would be given such acts.

See Famine in Women's Hats.

Paris, Sept. 25.—A famine in women's hats faces Paris for this winter, according to Millner Lewis, whose employes walked out in company with all the other milliners of Paris. "The milliners can not afford to pay the increases demanded by their employes," said Lewis, "while the girls, who number more than 700, say they will not return to work without an increase."

MAY MAKE CONCESSIONS

France Must Act to Save Germany From Revolution.

Washington, Sept. 25.—Germany will topple into a chaos of revolution unless France acts immediately and with some leniency.

Such was the reaction here to the news from Berlin that the German government had decreed the end of passive resistance in the Ruhr basin. Those most intimately in touch with European conditions were obviously anxious as to what would happen next in Germany. Chancellor Stresemann, it is recognized, has been carefully preparing the German people for the decree which meant unconditional surrender to France, but the reaction, according to reports from abroad, has been fraught with indications of danger.

Despite the uncompromising pronouncements emanating from French sources, the hope persists here that Premier Poincare and his associates have given Chancellor Stresemann reason to believe France will make certain concessions immediately upon the cessation of passive resistance. Unless concessions are made at once, it is felt the Stresemann ministry is doomed.

Ford Request Refused.

Washington, Sept. 25.—Secretary of War Weeks announced the sale of the Gorgas plant and other government improvements on the land of the Alabama Power company at Muscle Shoals to the Alabama Power company at an agreed upon sales price of $3,472,485. The Alabama Power company signified its final refusal to extend its option on the property to Nov. 1, as was requested by Henry Ford in a telegram to Secretary Weeks.

JOHNSON AIRS VIEWS

Says Great World War Taught European Diplomats Nothing.

Los Angeles, Sept. 25.—Senator Johnson discussed international affairs here. He said: "Foreign offices in Europe control its destiny and the same influences control foreign offices that have brought so often disastrous wars. The great world war taught them nothing. To become a partner of those whose views are so dissimilar to ours would put us in a war-breeding, war-making partnership. Seven different conflicts have been unchecked by the league of nations. Greece and Turkey fought a bloody war backed by the two most powerful members of the league, and neither the league nor the court intervened. Whatever there was of the moribund league and the league court was shot up the other day by Mussolini, and the conference of ambassadors, that is, the foreign offices of the great powers, went on in the same old European way."

American Embassy Robbed.

Madrid, Sept. 25.—Safe-breakers entered the United States embassy here, destroying much furniture. The robbers carried off considerable money, jewels, documents and books.

Hotel Stenographer

BY ROE FULKERSON

"Did you see that dame?" asked the House Detective excitedly. "Yeah," said the Hotel Stenographer. "I saw you tip your lid to her."

She asked me yesterday if you was married.

"Did you tell her?" asked the House Detective.

"Yes, Kelly," replied the girl. "I told her you were married and she said she was sorry for the woman, even if she didn't know her personally."

"I guess you've been trying to flirt!" Kelly, there are women in the world who take it as a compliment when a strange man wants to flirt with them. But those few are not worth flirting with.

"When a guy your age tries to flirt with a woman, all she thinks about is being sorry for his wife. Any time you throw out your chest and give some skirt the merry eye, you insult your wife and the woman knows it."

"If she falls for you and you send her candy and flowers, it's a sign she isn't worth sending flowers to. A lot of men think there is no more use sending flowers to a wife than to feed cheese to a mouse already caught. If the average married man spent as much time flirting with his own wife as he spends flirting with strange women, he would get a lot more return for his effort."

"It isn't much of a trick to get married these days. The real cat's whiskers is to stay that way. Still, I suppose if you said the nice things to your own wife that you say to other dames around the hotel she would think you had been sampling some of the evidence you had gathered against the bootleggers who do such a profitable business."

"A mighty sensible woman!" The House Detective nodded his head in approval.

Aborigines a Roman Term.

"Aborigines" was the name which the Romans applied to a tribe which they found in Latium. Assuming that that tribe had been there since the beginning ("ab." from, and "origine," beginning) the old Romans called those people literally "From the Beginning," says the Detroit News. When English-speaking persons and communities came in contact with peoples who had been in a given territory before they arrived there, they applied to them the same name, speaking generally.

Kills and Cures.

Cocaine, which is filling our jails and making the tooth extraction almost pleasant, comes from the coca plant, whose dried leaves South American Indians carry about with them in little bags. These leaves are chewed much as we use tobacco, when they are on journeys, and are extremely sustaining. Cocaine taken in this form is harmless, and if people would be content to chew the dried coca leaves instead of taking the concentrated form of the drug, no harm would be done.

TURN TO RIGHT STANDARD SIGNAL

This gentleman, an official of the American Automobile association, would "turn to the right" as indicated by the raised hand. This official of the A. A. A. is demonstrating on Washington streets the various standard signals which should be universally observed the country over.

RIGHT ESTIMATE OF STEEP GRADE

Not One Driver in Hundred Has Proper Calculation of Incline of Road.

(By ERWIN GREER, President of Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.)

"How steep is the grade on that road? Well, I should say that it is all of 30 or 35 per cent. But I didn't have any trouble in making it with my car. No sir. She pulled it like a house afire. Made it on high all the way. Passed two cars laboring along in second."

Has Not Proper Estimate.

How often, with variations, do we hear these words from drivers proud of the achievements of their cars frequently to the disparagement of higher-priced cars from which, presumably, a better performance should be expected. After listening to statements of this kind from hundreds of tourists anxious to tell of their trips and the remarkable exploits of their cars, one is at least convinced that not one man in a hundred has the proper estimate of the percentage of a grade encountered. No reliance is to be placed on such estimates expressed by any other than one who knows from actual measurements with a gradometer. Approaching an ascent the grade naturally appears steeper than it actually is. This, coupled with the performance of the individual car which may or may not make the grade in high gear gives rise to an incorrect estimate of the percentage of the grade.

Many motorists do not understand the process by which the designation of a grade percentage is arrived at, believing that a 20 per cent grade, for instance, is one which rises at an angle of 20 degrees from the horizontal. This is erroneous.

How to Find Percentage.

The designation of 20 per cent to a grade means that in the grade there is a perpendicular rise of 20 feet in 100 horizontal feet. In other words, to generalize the numerical percentage of a grade indicates that number of feet perpendicular rise in 100 horizontal feet. In relation to degrees it will be found that a grade percentage properly arrived at in this way forms an angle equal to about one-half of the angle formed when the numerical expression is taken to mean degrees. Definitely, a 30 per cent grade is about one-half as steep as the grade formed by a 30-degree angle from the horizontal.

The steepest grade on which a car can obtain traction is 45 per cent, and this is a very stiff grade, indeed. You can be reasonably certain that if you have estimated a grade as 30 or 35 per cent and your car pulls it in high gear that your estimate of the road's steepness is probably double or even more than it actually is.

DRIVING STRAIN IS RELIEVED

Stunt Is Simply to Turn Head to One Side and Watch Road With Eyes on Surface.

There is a way to remedy that neck and head strain that comes from the see-sawing of a car over a rough road. The stunt is simply to turn the head to one side and watch the road with the eyes on an angle to its surface. If the head is held up straight the motion of the car will keep jerking it back and forth, resulting in a sort of neck strain that is very tiresome. It is not recommended that the head be turned to one side constantly, but only as a relief from strain.

CAUSE OF IRREGULAR FIRING

Trouble Made by Defective Contact Point or Improper Movement of Interrupter.

The usual timer trouble, causing irregular firing of an engine, is defective contact point or improper movement of the interrupter. Sometimes the small arm bearing one of the points which opens and closes the electric circuit becomes dry at its hinging point and will not work freely or fast enough, and sometimes sticks altogether in the open position.

MEANS OF STARTING CAR ON LOW BATTERY

Method of Short Circuiting to Reduce Resistance.

If one cell of the storage battery is out of commission, the starter cannot be operated and the engine may be difficult to start because the internal resistance of the dead cell may be so great that it does not allow sufficient current to pass to produce a spark at the plugs when the engine is cranked by hand. The resistance of the dead cell may be overcome and the full current of the remaining cells made available if, after the cell at fault is located, a wrench or other piece of metal is held firmly in contact with the posts of the cell.

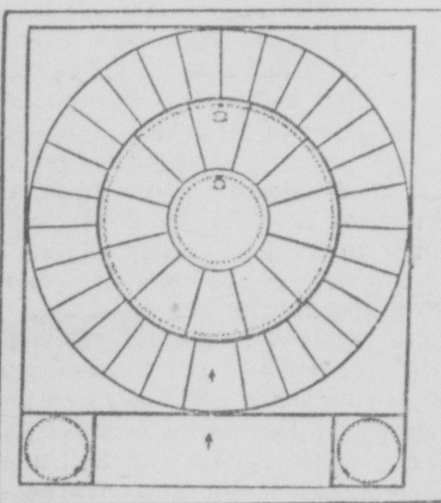

After the engine starts, the wrench may be removed because the generator will supply the current for ignition if the engine is kept running fast enough. Care should be taken to use this expedient only on a cell that is dead, as an active cell would be injured by the short circuit. The dead cell may be quickly found by using a hydrometer or voltmeter.

If the current is still insufficient to produce a satisfactory spark and the engine does not start, the resistance in the circuit to the spark coil may be further reduced by placing a shunt around the resistance coil usually found on the top of spark coils. This shunt may be of copper wire and need not be securely connected since it is advisable to remove it, or at least disconnect one end after the engine starts.

SPACE IS SAVED IN GARAGE

Vehicles Placed on Circular Turntable and Brought to Compartment to Be Used.

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing an invention of R. H. Irwin of Medford, Conn., says: The invention aims to provide a building especially adapted for use as a garage, or for storage purposes. The object is to construct a building in such a manner that space heretofore wasted will be used to the fullest extent and that vehicles stored therein will be readily available and that backing will be practically eliminated, the vehicles after entering the building being placed upon a turntable and brought in direct contact with the compartment to be occupied.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

Bamboo Poles as Water Jugs.

I took notes while we were at Epa of a rather curious method of drawing water from the communal spring, half a mile from the village. Twice a day the women went down in chattering groups to the spring, carrying bamboo pipes twelve feet long. These pipes are made by forcing out the pith at the joints, and held about five gallons apiece. When full, the drinking end was plugged with leaves, the pipe being stood in a shady spot near its owner's house and used when needed. Incidentally, drinking from these weird receptacles was a rather hazardous business, care being necessary lest a too copious supply should gush out when the pipe was held to the mouth. —H. C. Pratt in Wide World.

Ancient Greeks Played Ball?

An ancient Greek sculptured relief recently discovered in Athens, according to the London Times, gives evidence that the Greeks played ball games other than with the hand. The relief represents six naked youths taking part in a game bearing every resemblance to modern hockey. The curved stick used may possibly supply an explanation of the singular objects carved in relief on some of the votive offerings found at Sparta. These have been called "sickles." It is difficult to say why this implement should have been dedicated to Artemis, but the word "sickle" may have been the current slang for a boy's hockey stick.

Galapagos Islands.

The Galapagos islands lie under the equator off the coast of Ecuador. The air is frequently chilly, due to the cold antarctic currents which fan the coast of Peru and strike seaward toward the island group. Wild goats, cattle, cats and dogs, as well as hidden treasure, bear evidence of pirates. The soil is rich, fertile loam, nearly stoneless. There are but 3,500 head of cattle at present on Cristobal island and it can easily support 50,000. It is said that a three-year-old steer brings $100 (gold) live weight, at Guayaquil on the mainland—when a steamer can be induced to call and take the stock off.

Queer Uses for Coal.

Coal has been found to have many unexpected uses. Cheap white celluloid combs and fasteners, decorated with insets of "black diamonds," have a great fascination for the dusky beauties of the Congo, where they are used by traders for the exchange of goods with the natives. A shovelful of coal dross is a familiar sight in many pigsties. The coal grit is a valuable aid to digestion and reduces food costs. Miners do a profitable business in carving coal signet rings and ornaments, the finished article having the appearance of ebony; they are popular as souvenirs of mining regions.

HARTMAN THEATER

Here is an opportunity not to be overlooked. George M. Cohan, the "Yankee Doodle Boy" author and producer of more great successes than any one genius of the theater in the world has a brand new one that is to be presented at the Hartman theater in Columbus the week of Monday, September 24.

His new production, which is to be seen in Columbus before sophisticated Broadway gets a glimpse of it, is "The Song and Dance Man" and George M. Cohan wrote it especially for his new star, Lynne Overman. It is safe to say that George has "put another winner across the plate" and Hartman patrons are among the very first to see it.

It is said that Cohan had the idea suggested by the title in mind for some time and originally expected to play in it himself, but decided that Lynne Overman could better carry the character. Before he wrote a line of the script he engaged his full cast of players to support Overman with the result that each part is particularly arapted to the individual player engaged.

Much can be expected, therefore, from such sterling people as Overman, Frederick Perry, Will Deming, Louis Calhern, Robert Cummings, Eleanor Woodruff, Maye Methot, Laura Bennett and others.

The story of "The Song and Dance Man" is said to be unique in its style and plot. Mr. Cohan characterizes it as "an American comedy, but in keeping with the usual Cohan policy the doughty little producer does not wish to divulge the nature of the plot preferring to spring a complete surprise on his friends and admirers.

Mail orders should be sent to the Hartman boxoffice at once as the demand for reservations promises to be heavy. A Cohan offering is always an event of much note and in view of the fact that Columbus is to see it first even before the New York premiere the interest therein is of double intensity.

The engagement is for an entire week with the usual matinees.

APPAREL FOR WOMEN

New Coat Dresses Arrive With Fall

Wine Outfit Fills Gap Between Seasons; Complete in Itself.

The coat dress is new—new as a matter of pertinent style. Some women have known for many seasons that the coat dress would help out their wardrobe most remarkably. But now the majority of women seem to have incorporated the idea into their scheme of dressing. If you buy a coat dress now or one or two months hence, advises a fashion authority in the New York Times, you will be doing the thing that is being generally done, and all through the season you will be glad that you made your decision to buy a costume of this sort.

The coat dress combines the attributes of the coat and the dress in the most remarkable manner. It serves a purpose that is indispensable in the matter of a woman's wardrobe and it fills a gap between one well marked season and the next one with a certainty of style that is not to be disregarded.

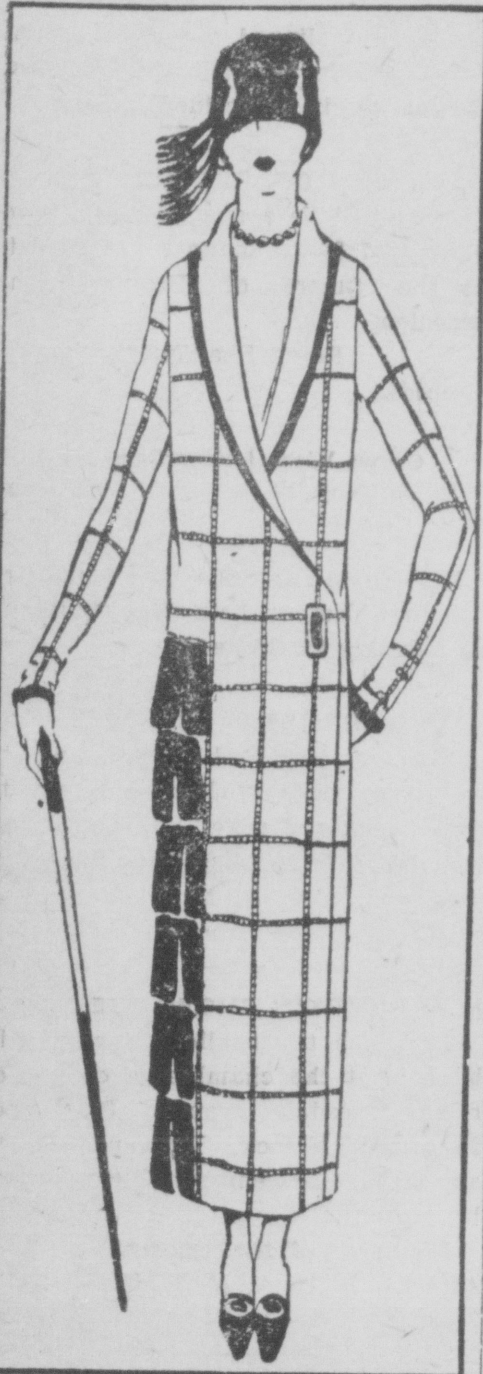

The coat dress is something which is complete in itself and as it stands. It needs no coat to carry out its scheme of street effectiveness. With a hat that is smart and that purports to carry out the lines of the design of the frock it becomes a most becoming sort of dress and one that every woman will welcome as a part of the clothes that she considers necessary for the beginning and carry through of a new season.

One of the advantages of a coat dress is the ease with which it is put on. There is usually one hook, and that generally at the side of the lowered waistline. At that point there is usually applied some sort of an ornamental buckle, and in very many instances that is the one spot of anything that might be called trimming on the entire gown.

The design of the coat dress is something that, while it is simplicity incarnate, still expresses one's individuality. It is straight and plain and uncompromising in all of its essentials, and at the same time it involves so many subtleties that it is sure to intrigue the woman who knows what good dressing means.

A Pleasing Combination.

To begin with, the coat dress is a happy combination of the severely tailored suit and the dressmaker's dress, as the prevalent costume is sometimes designated. It strikes that distance between the new and the old with a subtlety and art that will appeal to every woman who hates to strike too squarely into a new manner of dressing. She may have become tired of the old overblouse and skirt, she may not be ready to accept with alacrity the tailored suit which is offered her as the season's last word in style. Well, then, for her there is the coat dress, with all its grace and charm and with the tailored lines still kept intact, and with that dressiness for street wear carried out to the last degree of perfection.

Of course, there are many things to be considered when it comes to the adoption of the street dress as one's style for the season. One coat dress, you know, will go a great way in the establishment of a wardrobe that lives up to modern fashion dictates. First, there is the corset, for no woman looks really well in a frock of this sort unless her figure is properly corseted. The lines of the coat dress are too severely straight and plain to allow of its being worn over an uncorseted figure and, whether the corset is inconsiderable or not, it must still be a corset or something that in some way manages to hold in the hips and give them some semblance of studied shape. There has been too much of the uncorseted figure that slops about and has its own way regardless of the lines of dresses.

The Modern Corsets.

Some of the modern corsets are no more than bands of elastic bound about the hips. These are for the very slim of stature and they certainly do help, and this is especially true with the sort of frock in question, to give trim effect to the ultimate appearance and a street appearance, which even the young and beautiful cannot afford to disregard.

When it comes to women of more stately lines, there will be found corsets that mold the form most subtly to the lines that are established by the modern tailors and dressmakers. They have taken all this into account, and while they cannot guarantee, in any sense, to give a smart appearance in a coat dress or a suit to the uncorseted figure, they certainly can and do put their stamp of smartness in dressing upon the woman who comes to them corseted in accordance with the modern mode.

In this respect, as in many others, the wishes of the modern woman are paramount. Dressmakers respect her wish to be comfortable and easy in her dress through all the hours of the day. They do not wish anything confining in the way of corsets upon her, but they do insist that, in order that she shall be well dressed, she shall wear the proper sort of corset suited in the last line to the individual demands of her own figure.

Plainness over the hips (and this is characteristic in the extreme of the modern coat dress) and the straightness of the lines of the skirt, depends supremely upon the foundation of the figure's construction to make the costume a perfect thing to see.

Express Individuality.

Coat dresses are indicative of the modern mode, each one expressing some individual idea. You can see that they follow the same principle of hooking at the side and that their skirts, if they are not trimmed, are draped so that some line of divergence is given to the costume in that particular.

There is the surplice style, which will make its appeal to a large majority of women, and then there is the design that closes in a straight line clear to the neck, giving that straight and one-piece look to which so many women of the modern day are wedded. It all depends upon your figure and your particular appreciation of style which one of these frocks you will choose for your own, but you will be making a great mistake if you do not have something of the sort as an adjunct to your winter wardrobe, for you will find that, as the season progresses, you will wish more and more to have something of the sort to call your own.

These dresses, and many more that go to make up the modern styles, are statuesque in appearance. They are built along straight and uncompromising and architectural lines. They are essentially street things in their very appearance, and the art that has gone into their construction is everywhere quite evident.

For the entirely straight-lined coat dresses there are collars that roll over the shoulders or stand straight and high about the throat. These are made of brocades or lingerie materials according to your type and the general expression that you have adopted for your clothes. The surplice ones run to turn-back revers and they fold gracefully into a closing at a long waistline.

PLANTS OFFER BAIT TO GET HELP FROM ANIMALS

Botanical Expert Describes Strange Power of Locomotion in Some Flora.

The animal kingdom and the plant kingdom have been thought of as separate worlds, but science is finding many connecting bridges. Dr. Fred J. Seaver of the New York Botanical garden staff, in a recent lecture said that it has now become absolutely impossible to separate the lower animals from the lower plants.

We think of the plant as stationary, while the animal is able to move about, but many of the lower plants, such as the diatoms, swim about in the water, while many of the lower animals are fixed, he pointed out.

Going higher in the scale than the humble diatoms, we find plants adopting the fixed habit, said the lecturer, while animals developed to a high degree the power of locomotion. This, together with the fact that animals were largely dependent upon plants for food, had apparently resulted in many modifications of structure on the part of either the animal or the plant, or both.

Since higher plants were for the most part stationary, while animals were motive, it was necessary for the plant, generally speaking, to carry on a defensive warfare to keep from being destroyed by its hungry enemies. Many plants, especially the desert plants, had developed protective armaments of spines or thorns. Just how these devices originated, said Doctor Seaver, it was now difficult to say, but that they served their purpose could not be denied.

Again, since higher plants were unable to move about, many ingenious arrangements had been perfected for making use of the locomotory powers of animals for performing some of the necessary functions of plants. The plants used the locomotory powers of insects and other animals mainly in the pollination of their flowers and for the distribution of their seeds. The appeal was usually made to the animal's desire for food, which was offered as bait. In securing the desired food, the animal was made to serve the plant. Brilliantly colored flowers acted as signals, while the nectar which they contained was offered as recompense for the assistance rendered.

TO CRAWL 100 MILES ON ONE KNEE AND EAT DOG

Dr. J. T. House, professor of literature at the Nebraska State Normal school, who is to "go into the primeval" with a 100-mile crawl on his hands and one knee—the other being so tied up that he cannot use it. While on the trip he will live on berries, roots, field mice, and "etc"—the "etc" to include a dog which the professor will kill, cook in its own skin, and then eat. There is no bet connected—Professor House merely wants to prove he can duplicate the feat of Hugh Glass, a famous old trapper who was forced to crawl 100 miles on one knee, after his leg had been broken in a fight with a grizzly bear and he had been left for dead.

PENSIONS GIVEN TO ACTORS

Many in Berlin Supplied With Unemployment Doles.

Several dozen well-known actors and actresses, who accepted jobs with a summer stock company operating the Deutsches theater in Berlin, are now drawing unemployment pensions, as the venture failed and there is no prospect of a new management taking it over.

Under the circumstances these are lucky in being able to qualify for municipal unemployment doles, as numerous colleagues, unable to find summer employment because of the surplus of musical shows and reviews now holding Berlin stages, were forced to engage in various pursuits pending the opening of the fall season.

SUPREME COURT CONVENES

Taft and Albaugh Taxation Controversy to Be Decided Soon.

Columbus, Sept. 25.—Ohio supreme court convened today for the fall term. All members of the court were present with the exception of Judge Thomas A. Jones of Jackson. Judge Jones has been in Europe and is expected to return late this week. The suits instituted by opposing interests in the controversy over the Taft and Albaugh taxation laws, which are under referendum attack, are among the cases to be argued before the court. A decision in these cases is necessary before Ohioans will know whether they are to vote on the laws on Nov. 6. Questions involved in the suit include the status of the two laws with reference to liability to referendum, as well as the validity of the referendum petitions brought against them by the Ohio Association of Real Estate Boards.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

At the regular meeting of the Monday club this week, about thirty-five members were present. Mrs. W. T. Ulm, the president announced "Japan" as the subject for the evening's program. The roll call was responded to with names of Japan's exports. Mrs. Floyd E. Logee read a splendidly prepared paper on "Religious Japan." Mrs. R. B. Bales in her paper on "Industrial Japan" gave much valuable information. Mrs. W. L. Peters and Mrs. Cyrus Abernethy were elected as associate members. Miss Neil Weldon resigned as press correspondent and Miss Carrie Johnson was elected for half the year. The president, at the suggestion of Mrs. Howard Jones, urged the membership to attend the Logan Elm celebration October 7. A motion was made and carried asking for medical inspection of the children in our own public schools; and also give our support to our benevolent society in its efforts to push the inspection. Mrs. D. V. Courtwright, Miss Phelps and Miss Neil Weldon are especially interested in this work and doing all they can and trying hard to interest others. They related some terrible conditions of children who need operations for tonsils and adenoids. Committees were appointed to investigate and help relieve conditions if possible.

Nettles That Cause Death.

All species of nettles are unpleasant enough to handle roughly, but some of the foreign ones are most formidable plants. Several of the East Indian forms are truly dangerous, for, after the first itching sensation has passed away, it is often followed by a feeling as of hot irons being rubbed on the flesh, and the pain increases to such an extent that after hours—and sometimes days—the patient is seized with symptoms like those following influenza and lockjaw, while sometimes death results.

COAST GUARDS OF ENGLAND

More Than a Thousand Lighthouses and Lightships Under Control of Trinity House.

More than a thousand lighthouses and lightships guard the coasts of the British Isles, and all are under the control, direct or indirect, of Trinity House. For the purpose of control the coast is divided into districts, of which the London district is the most important. It extends from Southwold in Suffolk to the North Foreland in Kent.

The stores for this district are kept at Trinity wharf, at Blackwell, and here are to be seen casks of oil, anchors, mooring chains, complete lanterns and machinery of many sorts, as well as quantities of buoys of different sizes, shapes and colors.

The anchors used for mooring lightships are huge implements of iron shaped like great umbrellas, and as for the mooring chains, these are tested by hydraulic power up to 300 tons.

Can buoys, spherical buoys, wreck buoys, bell and gas buoys are here by the score. Some are new; others are old and battered, and have been brought in for painting and repair.

Painting buoys goes on all the year round, and the work is done by the men who are ashore from lightships or lighthouses. Life on a lightship is no joke, especially in bad weather, and each man after two months afloat gets a month ashore.

Since accidents sometimes happen to lightships, a relief ship is always kept moored at the wharf ready to start at a moment's notice to replace any vessel which has drifted from her moorings or been sunk in collision.—London Tit-Bits.

TELLS HOW HE STOLE MELON

Speaker on Honesty Says a Queer Shiver Ran Up His Spine and He Put Fruit Back.

Mr. Moneybags, the English profiteer, has just bought the largest house in the country town, and so he was recognized as the unofficial squire of the place.

He was in great demand as a speaker at all the local functions, and that is how he came to be on the platform at the annual prize-giving, due to give an address on "Honesty."

When his turn came to speak he related how, when quite a boy, he saw a cart of melons outside a shop and nobody in sight.

"On the spur of the moment," he said impressively—"on the spur of the moment, I say, I took one of those melons."

He paused for effect, and was not disappointed. The whole audience gave one gasp at the idea of their local bigwig doing such a thing.

"But," he went on, "instantly a queer sensation assailed me and a shiver went through me. I made up my mind, and I went back to the cart and replaced the melon—(loud applause)—and took a ripper one!"—Pittsburgh Chronicle.

Scientific View of Earth.

A French scientist finds in the great depths of the Arctic ocean an argument tending to show that the earth is slightly topshaped, the protuberance corresponding to the point of the top being at the south pole. This, he thinks, would explain the different results arrived at by the various measurements of astronomers and geodests.

The differences are very small in comparison with the entire bulk of the globe, yet they are readily appreciable, and one of the explanations that has been suggested for them is that the earth is tetrahedral in form. But the Frenchman thinks the top-shape theory is preferable. The fact that to an eye looking at the earth from a point in space it would not sensibly differ in appearance from a true sphere shows how refined are the methods of science which enable men living on the surface of the globe to detect variations in its general contour.—New York Sun.

Star Four Years Away.

If the light of all the stars were to go out at once, it would be at least four years before we noticed any difference in their light. After that time these lights in the sky would disappear one by one, according to their distance from the earth. No one living today would see the last starlight go out if all their lights were extinguished at once. The nearest star takes four and one half years for its light to come to us. We say a star is so many "light years" away, basing its distance on the time it takes its light to reach us. It takes light 100,000 years and more to reach us from some of the farther stars. From some of the more distant stars we are just now receiving the light that originally emanated from them way back in the Stone age—before history. It has taken it all these years to reach us.

The Thrifty Partners.

Two Aberdonians, who were keen business men, started on their own account, and it was part of the co-partner agreement, that one of them should do the canvassing for orders in the forenoon, and the other in the afternoon. A customer of the firm entered, and knowing this arrangement, remarked:

"You're late today in going out, Mr. McGregor."

"Yes, you see it's a Tag day in the town today, and I am waiting on my partner returning with his tag. No use of two of us buying the same commodity."

USED BOARDS TO GUIDE CAR

Hero of Desert Automobile Race Won Third Money Owing to His Resourcefulness.

I used to hear a lot about the old Los Angeles-to-Phoenix desert races, which were run in two or three relays, the drivers checking in at all-night stops at the end of each day. These races were run at a season of the year when rain on all or part of the course was not unusual. It took brains, a powerful car and a heavy foot to negotiate that muddy course.

Bill O'Day was my hero in the Phoenix struggle. He wasn't licked unless his motor fell out of the chassis or something else just as bad happened.

In one of these races Bill was running pretty well up in front on the third day. He was sitting pretty, in spite of having wallowed through mud for two days. But bad luck got him. He broke his steering arm—I mean on the car. That would have been the curtain for most drivers.

But old Bill and his mechanic took two fence rails and wired one to the axle on the inside of each front wheel. Then they got into the car, each one holding to the rail on his side of the car. They guided that car into the fair grounds at Phoenix by pressing the rails against the front tires when they wanted to turn.

That is, when they wanted to go to the right the man on the right side of the car would pull in on his fence rail and the end of it would then press on that part of the right front tire ahead of the front axle. At the same time the man on the left would so manipulate his fence rail as to press on the left front wheel behind the front axle and thus both front wheels would be turned in the right direction.

The tires were cut to pieces on the sides, but the car finished in third place—and that was the important thing.—Saturday Evening Post.

With Happiness.

We heard a stranger philosophizing about the feverishness of a visit. "One evening it was a ride, the next a trip to the movies, the next dancing, and so on. Always restlessness. We're getting so we can't sit still." Do we deserve Stevenson's advice and indictment:

"We are in such haste to be doing, to be writing, to be gathering gear, to make our voice audible a moment in the derisive silence of eternity, that we forget that one thing, of which these are but the parts—namely, to live. . . . We run to and fro like frightened sheep. And now you are to ask yourself if, when all is done, you would not have been better to sit by the fire at home and be happy thinking. To sit still and contemplate—to remember the faces of women without desire, to be pleased by the great deeds of men without envy, to be everything and everywhere in sympathy, and yet content to remain where and what you are—is not this to know both wisdom and virtue, and to dwell with happiness?"—Collier's.

Probation Precedes Vows.

In most of the Nyasaland tribes, in Africa, permanent carnal life is preceded by a term of probation, which can be broken off at will by either party. When the woman has finally made up her mind to stay, she punctuates her decision by kneeling when she addresses her husband. As a rule, she will inaugurate this change in their relations by a little coup de theater. She will choose an occasion when chance has brought together a goodly number of people, and she sees her husband standing among them. She will then walk right up to him, kneel down before him, put some trivial question, or give some unimportant piece of information, wait for the reply in a kneeling posture, and, after this has been given, get up and join the others. By thus humiliating herself, she has taken possession of her husband.

In some tribes, as, for instance, that of the Wangoni, where probation is not required, the girls will postpone kneeling until after marriage.—Atlantic Monthly.

Giving Meyerbeer a Treat.

Musicians are proverbially jealous of one another; but not all of them can manage to get a smile out of that unfortunate fact, as the gentle and merry-hearted composer Rossini once did. Rossini, who lived most of his life in Paris, was walking one day on the boulevard with his friend Braga. They met the composer Meyerbeer, who stopped and inquired politely after Rossini's health. "It's bad, very bad, my dear Meyerbeer," answered Rossini, "I have a splitting headache, a strange pain in my side and a leg that troubles me constantly." After Meyerbeer had condoled sufficiently he passed on, and Braga asked Rossini how he happened to have become suddenly so unwell. "Oh, I'm well enough," said Rossini with a laugh. "But I wanted to give Meyerbeer a moment's pleasure. He would be so delighted to see me go to pieces!"—Youth's Companion.

How He Knew.

"Changed your brand of shaving soap, haven't you?" asked Uncle Penwynye of the barber. "Yes, sub. Feels smoother?" "No, taste's different."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Fountain of Youth.

"What! You are planning to go to Vienna? But that will cost you a fortune."

"Oh, not so much. You see, I'll have my youth restored by Doctor Steinhach and came back on a child's ticket."—Laetitia Blatter.

AMUSEMENTS

Proving itself to be a genuinely entertaining production, "The White Flower," a Paramount picture starring Betty Compson, was shown with flattering results at the Met theater last night.

This production is entirely different from "Kick In," in which Miss Compson last appeared. In "The White Flower" she has the role of the young daughter of an American father and a Hawaiian mother. She falls in love with a young American. Just as she begins to be confident that she has won his love, Ethel Granville, his fiancée, arrives from the states and temporarily upsets all her plans.

By an original scheme Konia (Miss Compson) finally fixes everything so that Ethel tells Bob that she cannot possibly marry him. This leaves Bob free, but Konia is not to be won so easily.

Where one would expect the end of the picture it does not come, but the finale comes in a novel manner. The picture exhales the languor and mysticism of the tropics.

Edmund Lowe plays the leading masculine role of Bob Rutherford opposite Miss Compson. The support generally is excellent.

GOVERNOR DONAHEY HERE.

Governor Donahey and a party of three friends came down Sunday afternoon unannounced and tarried a short while in the town and then went down to the Logan Elm park to catch a glimpse of the historical elm tree made famous by the Shawnee Indian chief, Logan. The governor had heard so much about this famous old tree and the history surrounding it, that he wanted to see the monarch of the elm family. He slipped one over on the newspapers in his visit and we learned of it merely by accident.

PROBING GIRL'S MURDER

Victim Said to Have Mailed Postcards to Six Men Just Before Tragedy.

Millville, N. J., Sept. 25.—A tale of love and spurning of convention filled the brief 15 years of pretty Emma Dixon's life, who was slain on a lonely stretch of the state road near here 10 days ago. Emma was a precocious high school pupil and organist of the Old Nazareth church.

The authorities have established the fact that on the day before Emma disappeared she mailed postcards to six different men in Millville and the neighboring communities. The names of four of these men are known. Three of them are married and the other is engaged to a respectable, wealthy girl of a neighboring town. The authorities believe that either jealousy or fear of exposure will be found to be the motive behind the murder of Emma.

Look That Lingers.

Most of us keep at least one eye on the temptation we pray not to be led into.—Greenville (S. C.) Piedmont.

No Feminism Here.

His royal highness, the cock pheasant, is most attentive to the six or seven members of the harem in the early days of their nesting. They are honored with frequent visits and a peculiar kind of crow and a flutter of wings always announces the approach of the cock. As sitting time draws near the hens add their breast feathers to the nest, and when a full clutch is laid they take a hard-earned holiday before the arduous 24 days of hatching. At this period they follow a regular routine; when one hen leaves her nest for the necessary feed, it is the signal for the others to follow, and the party is incomplete until the proud cock struts to join his unassuming wives.

World's Smallest Fish.

The smallest fish in the world are said to be found in Lake Buhl, on the island of Luzon, Philippines. This fish, which the natives call the smarapan, is the most minute vertebrate animal known to science. It weighs only half a grain, and half an inch is its maximum length. This was verified by the director of the American Museum of Natural History. He not only said the item was correct, but gave some additional information and compared the minute fish with a whale. He writes as follows: "Mistichthys luzonensis; one weighs 1.9836 grains, 14,000,000 weigh one ton and 840,000,000 weigh sixty tons—blue whale's weight."

Natives Eat Lizards, Ants.

An English party under Lord Dewar, making a 2,500-mile trek across the Sudan to Belgian Congo, discovered among other things, that the population has doubled in 20 years, while the big game of the country is fast disappearing, says the Detroit News. Traveling 40 days by camel and 17 by donkey, the party was in constant danger from natives and insects, among which may be counted the mosquito. The Sudan now has about 5,000,000 people, and in some spots the finest cotton in the world is raised. Natives eat roots, berries, insects and such animals as lizards, white ants and dried caterpillars.

Made Merry Monarch.

One of the most valuable remedies yet discovered is quinine, known since 1655, when it passed under the name of "Jesuit's Powder." This bark came to England about 1660, and Charles II was considerably relieved by it during an attack of fever. Two French astronomers who were traveling in Peru encountered the bark, and sent it home to Linnaeus, the celebrated botanist, who named it Cinchona in honor of the wife of the Spanish viceroy of Peru, who, falling ill of fever, was administered quinine by a native woman knowing of its medicinal properties, and derived much benefit from it.

Feudal Survivals.

The duke of Atholl holds part of his lands on condition that he presents a white rose to his sovereign when honored with a visit, and once, when Queen Victoria and the prince consort visited a former duke in midwinter he found it difficult. Worse off seem the Munros of Foulis, who have to pay rent in the form of a snowball whenever called on to do so. Actually, as there is never any lack of snow on the summit of Ben Wyvis, which lies within their boundaries, the condition is a comparatively easy one.

Save Old Nails and Tacks.

When you open boxes, take up carpets, or do anything that produces a crop of ancient, bent nails or useless tack, save them. Then, the next time you repot or transplant flowers, scatter the nails and tacks through the bottom layer of the soil, set in the flowers or plants, and fill the pot with rich loam. When you water the plants the nails will rust; the product of this oxidation will enrich the soil remarkably. You will be agreeably surprised with the strong and beautiful growth of the plants.

A Striking Compliment.

Gen. Robert E. Lee received a striking compliment from an enemy on the day of his surrender at Appomattox Court House. The Federal General Meade was a former friend of his in the "old army," and when the formalities of capitulation were over, he remarked pleasantly to him: "Meade, years are telling on you; your hair is getting quite gray." "Ah! General Lee," was Meade's prompt reply. "It is not the work of years. It is you who are responsible for these gray hairs."

Ego in Divorce Court.

Ego is the mainspring of the film industry, from star to janitor, and in no place is this more in evidence than in the divorce court. The other day a case came up in which a pretty young thing asked for separation and $5,000 a year alimony. "How much does your husband earn a year?" the court wanted to know. "Why, he earns $5,000 a year," said the sweet young thing. "But I know he could earn more if he had to and I'm willing he should keep all that."

Soap Bubble's Thickness.

As a soap bubble floats in the light of the sun it reflects to the eye an endless variety of gorgeous tints. Each of these tints corresponds to a certain thickness of the substance forming the bubble, scientists claim. Near the highest point of the bubble, just before it bursts, can be seen a spot which reflects no color and appears black. The thickness of the bubble at this black point is said to be the two million-five-hundred-thousandth part of an inch.

NOT ALL QUACKS

Drug Prepared by Chinese Doctors Vindicated.

Bufo Obtained From Toads for Heart Remedy Was Used for Centuries in the East.

That native Chinese doctors despite their supposed quack medicines and methods dating centuries back are sometimes in advance of scientific research and modern medical knowledge is pointed out by Dr. C. H. Barlow in an article relating some of his experiences in China.

"One day," Doctor Barlow states, "while rowing along in my boat on a canal in Soochow, I noted with a good deal of interest a man who held a tall basket. He was at a distance but I could make out that he was emptying some living things from the basket which were swimming away in every direction from the shore. My curiosity being aroused, I asked my boatman what the man was doing, eliciting the following information: 'The man is a Buddhist priest who is laying up merit by collecting toads from different localities and then liberating them in a safe place.'

"Being interested in herpetology and desiring to see the variety of toad he was letting go, I directed the boatman to row over to where I could see the creatures more distinctly. When we arrived I found the surface of the water alive with specimens of the big Asiatic toad, some of which I captured and put in my boat.

"On arriving in Shaoshing and telling my teacher of the experience, he informed me that the man was not a priest but that he was a doctor and that he had been keeping the toads to get medicine from them. Many a time have we all seen on the tables of the street doctors the skins of toads dried and used for medicine. The teacher also informed me that the medicine obtained from the toad is a very efficient heart remedy, and described the method of securing it. The toad is held firmly in one hand, while the biggest wart-like swelling just behind the eye is touched lightly with a hot iron, whereupon a whitish juice is exuded by the toad. This is scraped off and put on to a glass plate and another toad is taken, and the operation repeated till there is a good supply of the white juice. This is then allowed to evaporate slowly to a powder, which is used to make up into pills and solutions as a heart remedy. On asking my teacher whether it is a really beneficial remedy or not, I was assured that it is a very valuable remedy indeed. This information, I am afraid, I took with a grain of salt.

"Now the story changes a bit in its external features, but not in its essentials. Soon after the above experience I noted in my Journal of The American Medical Association the following account:

"Two experimenters at the Rockefeller Research Institute in New York City in experimenting with Bufo asiaticus found that by stimulating the parotid gland of that toad by means of electricity they obtained a white secretion, the active principle of which they have named Bufo, after the toad. On experimenting with bufo on animals it was found to be almost identical in its physiological action to digitalis. It has been added to our pharmacology as a useful drug."

"Thus does the laboratory vindicate empirical medicine of the century-old Chinese system."

Candy Tree of India.

It is said that in India there flourishes a species of tree that produces a kind of "candy," if that term may be applied in this relation. This tree is known as the bassia, and of the three important species two show sugary flowers and the third is called the "Indian butter tree." Now the petals of the flowers are rich in sugar, and drop from the tree in the early morning. They are picked up by the women and the children, and are spread out on mats to dry in the sun. A single tree will, it is said, provide 300 pounds of flowers annually. When fresh, these flowers are very sweet and taste much like figs. They are eaten fresh or cooked with rice, shredded coconut or flour. The seeds of the butter tree are full of oil, and this oil is used to make a kind of butter, and also for soap and for candles.

Seal of the United States.

The seal adopted June 20, 1782, by a committee appointed to secure a suitable device for a great seal of the United States, consists of a spread eagle, having on its breast a shield with thirteen stripes and a chief azure, and in its beak a scroll bearing the motto E Pluribus Unum. In one talon is a bundle of arrows, and in the other an olive branch. Above the head is a "glory" emerging from the clouds and surrounding thirteen stars. On the reverse side is an unfinished pyramid—symbolic of the strength and growth of the Union; above it is an eye, surrounded by a triangle. Around the rim are the mottoes Annuit Cœptis (He [God] has favored the undertaking) and Novus Ordo Seclorum (A new order of things). The great seal has never been altered, and is in the custody of the secretary of state.

"You expect to make a farmer of your boy, Josh?"

"No," answered Mr. Cornstossel. "But he's got to stick around the farm long enough to get a reputation so that he'll mebbe stand some chance as a politician."

OHIO HISTORY DAY.

Hon. C. B. Galbreath, secretary of the State Archaeological and Historical society accompanied by Dr. Frank Warner of Columbus, also a member of the society, were in the city today seeing the local members of the organization as to the celebration that will be held at Logan Elm park Sunday, October 7. The program starts sharply at 2 o'clock. This is the third annual meeting held at Logan Elm park. The other meetings were held in 1921 and 1922.

AT THE COURT HOUSE

Granted Divorce.

Joseph W. Winfough was granted a divorce from Pearl Winfough in probate court Monday and was given the control and custody of his minor child, Winifred Winfough. The couple was married July 26, 1897. He charges his wife with gross neglect, dissatisfaction with home life, continuously finding fault and refusing to perform the duties of marital life. I. F. Snyder represented the plaintiff.

Character Revealed by Old Shoes.

There is a good deal of character revealed in a pair of old shoes if one wants to study them. Shoes that are worn away on the outside denote a disorderly and unsystematic mind. The shoe which is worn away at the toe before it has commenced to go anywhere else denotes conceit and self-satisfaction but a hard-headed business person that is apt to get along. The heel worn away and the toe turned up indicates a tinge of vulgarity.

Audubon's Method.

No one, I think, paints in my method; I, who have never studied but by piecemeal, form my pictures according to my ways of study. For instance, I am now working on a fox; . . . and when satisfied with the truth of the position, I take my palette and work as rapidly as possible; the same with my birds; if practicable I finish the bird at one sitting—often. It is true, of 14 hours—so that I think they are correct, both in detail and composition.—Audubon.

Strange Experience.

A Topeka woman says the worst sensation is that feeling of "growing old" when one is asked to chaperon a party of "young folks" when there are several in the party older than the chaperon is.—Kansas City Star.

Horse's Action Instinctive.

The reason that a horse lays back his ears when angered harks back to the days of the wild horse, when fights between wild stallions were everyday affairs. When engaged in a fight the horse's natural instinct was to protect his most sensitive organ, his ears, from the cruel teeth of his opponent. With this end in view he would lay them well back along his neck, out of harm's way.

Domestic Storm Warnings.

The following pleasant recipe for being happy, though married, was given by an old village woman to her daughter, who was married recently: "Do as your father and I did, my dear. Whenever he came home feeling contrary, he wore his hat on the back of his head, and that were a sign. And then I never said a word. And whenever I felt cross or crooked, I threw my shawl over my left shoulder, and then he never dared say a word."

Rotation to Prevent Disorders of Beans
Hand Pick Disease-Free Pods to Use for Seeding.
Plant beans on the same land not oftener than once in three or four years, particularly if disease has been prevalent. Soils which once become thoroughly infected as a result of continuous cropping are seldom safe to use for the same or closely related crops for years to come.
Wherever practical, destroy all diseased vines and trash by burning.
If the bean straw from diseased vines is to be fed, do not use the manure on a field that is to be planted to beans.
As far as possible avoid cultivating the beans early in the morning when there is dew on them, or when they are wet with rain.
Hand pick disease-free pods, or if possible, select disease-free plants for seed. Use these to plant a seed plot on land which has never raised beans, and which is removed some distance from the main crop.
Remember that hand picking of seed as it comes from the fall or thrasher for the purpose of controlling disease is of no value, since it is impossible to detect even a small percentage of diseased seed.
Seed treatment of beans is of no practical value, since any chemical that would penetrate the seed deeply enough to destroy the disease-producing organism would likewise be apt to kill the seed.
Spraying with bordeaux mixture, 5-4-50 formula, even when done thoroughly by competent persons, is at best unsatisfactory, unprofitable and only partially successful.—Walter G. Sackett, Bacteriologist, Colorado Experiment Station.

Leader Feels His Power Gone.
In full health a stag is always proud of his ability as leader and champion, and waves his gleaming flag incessantly, signaling to his family that way. Hit him with a bullet, and down goes his flag instantly. He will save himself if he can. But he does not wave on the others to follow him. Scatter and save yourselves, he would say.

Find Silage Profitable as Feed for Baby Beeves
Recent feeding tests with baby beeves at the Minnesota experiment station show that silage can be profitably used in fattening baby beeves. In the tests, which were conducted by W. H. Peters and N. K. Carnes, calves getting silage, plus a full feed of grain, fed more regularly and required less skillful and careful feeding than calves getting a heavy feed of grain and no silage.
The silage-fed calves gained 2.36 pounds per head per day as an average of a 196-day feeding period, while the calves fed without silage gained at the rate of 2.22 pounds per head per day. Although the calves fed without silage were valued at 10 cents per hundred pounds above those which had silage, the silage-fed calves showed a net profit of $17.90 per head while those without silage made a profit of $16.15 per head.
In another test barley proved practically equal to corn, pound for pound, in making gains on fattening calves. However, because of the greater cost of the barley and the smaller saving of feed made by hogs following, the corn-fed calves showed a profit of $16.15 per head, while the profit on those fed barley was but $6.91 per head.
Pure bred beef calves, high-grade beef calves and common calves showing some traces of beef breeding made similar gains on similar amounts of feed. The difference in selling price was marked, however, the pure breeds bringing $86.78 per head, the grades $83.45 and the common calves only $56.18 per head.

Sheep Raising Spurred by Advance in Prices
"The farmer who has the equipment and feeds at hand should be encouraged in raising lambs," says Phil A. Anderson of the animal husbandry division, University of Minnesota. "But farmers entering this field should go slowly at first and study the requirements very thoroughly," he adds.
Mr. Anderson makes the foregoing statement in view of the greatly increased interest exhibited in sheep production the last few months, which has been brought about by advancing prices for wool, a steady lamb market and good profits made in feeding lambs during 1921-1922.
Stocks of wool, which accumulated during the war and immediately after, have now been converted into merchandise. Manufacturers short of mill supplies and eager to keep the mills going have become anxious to buy, causing the price to go up.
"Prices of lambs have been at $12 to $15 per 100 pounds for a long time, with a variation of $2 to $2.50 for shorn lambs," says Professor Anderson. Such prices should be an inducement for many farmers to have flocks of 25 to 35 ewes or more which will consume green food perhaps otherwise wasted and convert it into a marketable product. With wool and market stock high in price, because of a decrease in the number of sheep in the United States and the action of the new protective tariff, our sheep breeders can surely compete with the breeders of other countries."

A LETTER

By ADA FEINBERG

(© 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

TUESDAY—a very reminiscent evening.

Lora, dear: I meant to have answered your vivacious letter a bit earlier, but I am always so tired when my day's work in the cotton mill is over that it seems I haven't fortitude enough to face another day—another day of drudgery in the mill. I am pleased to hear that you and your husband had such a delightful trip to the gold mining districts of Nevada. My boy is about as usual—capable and ambitious; but he had little opportunity here. Hence he was anxious to leave Huntsville; and, what is more, Alabama, where you spent your girlhood, and I my life. Lora, can you, my girlhood friend, guess—feel what that meant to me at the sunset of my life?

But he had to go—and I let him go without a murmur, for there was a girl, a nice, sweet little girl with dreamy, sparkling blue eyes. And he had to make his way for her, Lora, for she was and is his incentive—his inspiration. Don't think for one fraction of a second, dear friend, that I entertain any bitter feeling toward my boy. On the contrary, he has a mother's blessings.

Thoughts of my boy's absence bring back memories tonight—memories of a twilight melting summer day, when the softness of noon hid itself between the blazing, scorching rays of sunset. It was just a few evenings after Larry had left me and our boy to sleep in the Great Beyond, and the birth of each morning still found me seeking his face—aching for a sound of his voice—that a dear little old lady stood in my doorway. Months later she told me that she hailed from the North.

"I have come to help you a bit and take care of your boy while you work," said Aunt Matilda, as my boy and I learned to call her later. "I," she continued, "have learned that you've been left a widow and must go to work, and so I thought perhaps you'd rather let me take care of your boy while you worked rather than place him in a home. Won't you let me stay?" she pleaded.

Lora, my heart wept for her. She was sixty if she was a day. She took off her shabby black silk hat as I led her into my front room, revealing the whitest hair I have ever laid eyes upon. Her oval face was pink, clear and animated; her soft brown eyes told a tale of sorrow which her nicely-formed, rosy lips, that showed firmness and quick decision, didn't disclose. And then and there, Lora, I resolved that if I could earn but one piece of bread a day she would share it with my boy and me. And how she worshiped, idolized my boy! And yet not once did she tell me of her past life. It was a closed book.

Eighteen years passed. Aunt Matilda was overtaxed. Every day she had worked beyond her years caring for my boy and home. My boy grew to manhood. He was like the dawn of day—hopeful and confident. It was a hard struggle for me to send him to college, but he went, and came back ready and willing to shoulder my responsibilities. And then came the girl—she is my daughter now.

It was just about the time Aunt Matilda became ill—a few months before she passed on. How intently she watched and questioned my face as I sat by her bedside. Once she said to me: "Virginia, my daughter, you won't stand in your boy's way, will you?"

Stand in his way—never! I thought—at least, not while the story that Larry had told me of his mother—how she refused to recognize him as a son when she learned of me—rang in my ears. Oh, the anguish of my heart when Aunt Matilda spoke to me thus. Lora, for I knew that the harsh words of Larry's mother contributed to his death, for after he came South with me he lost trace of her.

Not long after this incident Aunt Matilda fell into that peaceful slumber that knows no rude awakening. And thus the little lady that had shared my years of toll lay serene and calm.

I reflected that Larry was gone, and now Aunt Matilda, and soon my boy would be gone—and that girl was taking him away from me—his mother, Lora! Heaven alone knew how my soul rebelled—how I hated, hated that girl then. And yet I knew that if I said one word to my boy he would give her up and not go North. Weeks before I had decided not to accompany them.

And then I knelt down and prayed near the coffin, and as I did so my eyes scanned a locket, about the size of a half dollar, around Aunt Matilda's throat. She had told me to take it from her when she died and to open it.

I did as she had bade me, dear friend, and then I saw light—she had shown me the way—the way to let my boy go and to love his girl as my daughter.

Lora, I now know why she called me daughter. And evening after evening as I sit alone dreaming—well, just dreaming of Larry and my boy, my thoughts creep back to Aunt Matilda. How I miss her!

The locket lies on the table as I write to you now. What supreme happiness it gives me to open it and look at Larry's picture, taken shortly before our marriage!

You know, dear friend, Aunt Matilda was Larry's mother—my boy's grandmother. May she be granted a place in heaven! Reminiscently, your friend, VIRGINIA DIXIE

Bees Do Queer Things.
An automobile collision threw one of the vehicles and its occupants over a bank into a hive of bees. VISITS HIGH SCHOOL.

Rev. J. A. Dunkel, pastor of the Tabernacle Presbyterian church, who is here on a short visit to his sister, Mrs. W. H. Lathouse, spent a short time visiting the high school this morning and thru the invitation of Superintendent J. O. Eagleson, made a short address to the high school students on the conjugation of the verbs, to have, to be and to do. The address was most interesting and if the ideas illustrated by his short talk are carried into effect thru life they will prove most beneficial. Rev. Mr. Dunkel is a product of Walnut township and he has made a name for himself in the church councils of the Presbyterian church.

RELIC OF BURIAL CUSTOM

Stuffed Parrot Placed Near Grave of Duchess Who Was Buried in Westminster Abbey.

It was once the curious custom in England to carry wax effigies of the dead—if they were distinguished enough—in their funeral processions. It was also customary to leave the effigies near the grave for some time thereafter, and the mourning friends of the deceased were used to compose elegies, rhymed laments and similar productions, which they would write fairly out on paper and pin to the clothing of the effigy. A number of the quaint old effigies are still preserved at Westminster abbey, where they are stored in the Islip chapel, and one at least, that of Frances, Duchess of Richmond, is still to be seen beside her grave in Henry VII's chapel.

The fair duchess was something of a figure at the court of Charles II, and she was for some years a particular favorite of the merry monarch. Her effigy at Westminster is magnificently dressed in the robes she wore on some great occasion—the coronation perhaps of Queen Anne—and beside it on its perch is the stuffed body of her grace's pet parrot. It is a strange thing to be seen in this last resting place of the great and famous. Doubtless it is the only creature not human on whom such distinction has been conferred. The story goes that the parrot died of grief within a few days of its mistress, and that it was carried in her funeral procession on account of her great affection for it. How it happened to be left in the abbey and why it has never been dispossessed of its place there no one seems to know. It has been there so long now, watching like Tut-Ankh-Amen's two guardian statues over the last slumbers of its fair mistress, that it may fairly be thought to have established a prescriptive right to its post of honor.—From Youth's Companion.

Patron of Navigation.

Between seventeen and eighteen hundred years ago there was a very holy bishop in Italy named Elmo. He was canonized not long after his death, and became very popular among the sailors on the Mediterranean, especially during storms. Eventually he was known as the special patron of navigation.

His name lives nowadays chiefly because of an electrical appearance called St. Elmo's Fire, or St. Elmo's Light. This is either a ball of fire or a brush or star of light, sometimes seen, especially in southern climates, during thunderstorms, at the tops of masts, spires or other pointed objects. It is often accompanied by a rushing, hissing noise, and is of the same nature as the light caused by electricity streaming from points connected with an electrical machine.

The Waiter's Gibe.

General Pershing said at an American Legion banquet in New Orleans: "Since the war we are all great French scholars. You remember, of course, the doughboy in the French restaurant who ordered a certain item on the menu only to be told by the waiter:

"'Sorry, monsieur, but the band is playing that.'

"Another doughboy said in a brasserie:

"'A cafe-au-lait, please, without milk.'

"'Yes, sir,' said the waiter. 'And will you have tea or coffee in it, sir?'"

He Knew the Doctor.

A certain celebrated doctor hated to pay his bills, and got out of doing so whenever he could. One day the doctor employed a workman to mend some pavement just outside of his house. Afterward he exclaimed:

"Why, you rascal! Do you expect to be paid for such a piece of work? Why you have spoiled my pavement and then covered it over with earth to hide the bad work!"

The workman winked knowingly. "Doctor," he retorted slyly, "mine is not the only bad work the earth hides."

Cabbage Had Double Life.

A reader says she left a quarter of a cabbage on the kitchen table early in the winter; in a few days new green leaves began to sprout and now the cabbage is quite large and seems to have seed coming on.

REV. J. A. DUNKEL

Passenger on Train When Engine Comes to Sudden Stop—No One Injured.

Rev. J. A. Dunkel, minister in charge of the Tabernacle Presbyterian church, Indianapolis, Indiana, who is here on a visit to his sister, Mrs. W. H. Lathouse, of Watt street, had the experience of his life Monday afternoon. He was coming east over the Pennsylvania railroad, when the engine drawing his train stopped suddenly near London. The passengers were thrown from their seats but no one was injured. Rev. Dunkel was in the dining car and he was just about to take a sip of coffee when the sudden shock emptied the contents on his shirt front. The sudden stoppage was caused by a water cock blowing off causing the train's automatic air device to go bad. Another engine ordered from Columbus pulled the train in just before reaching Columbus. The same train collided with a five ton gravel truck eight miles west of Columbus. The driver of the truck escaped injury. The truck was a mass of ruins.

Rev. Dunkel is on his way to Atlantic City, New Jersey, to attend the general council of the Presbyterian church, which meets at the Hotel Chalfant. From there he goes to New York City to attend a meeting of four boards; The Foreign and Home Missions, Executive and Ministerial Relief and the Sustentation.

ISSUES ORDERS TO THE MILITIA

Governor Walton to Stop Legislators At All Costs.

MILITARY FORCES INCREASED

Oklahoma's Chief Executive Also Orders All Citizens Between 21 and 45 to Hold Themselves in Readiness For Service—Klan Leader Intimates He Will Bring Suit For Alleged Criminal and Civil Libel.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Sept. 25.—Governor Walton, facing the crisis of his career tomorrow, has ordered Adjutant General Baird H. Markham, commander of the Oklahoma national guard, to "use all the military forces of the state—all force of arms necessary"—to prevent the legislative quorum of the house of representatives meeting, in accordance with its avowed plan.

The governor commanded all citizens between the ages of 21 and 45 to hold themselves in readiness for service. His official order to the military left no further chance to doubt that he means to stop the "rebel legislators" at all costs, even that of statewide violence and bloodshed, if it should come to that extreme.

The governor reiterates that the Ku Klux Klan "was declared to be an enemy of the sovereign state of Oklahoma," and refers to evidence of its military court of inquiry as purporting to show that "it has taken over the political government in many cities and counties." Murders, kidnappings and other outrages are again charged to the Klan as an organization.

In a supplemental statement to newspaper correspondents, the governor added that the troops would be ordered to shoot to kill, if necessary, to halt the legislators in their determination to assemble against his edict.

The grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan N. C. Jewett, struck back and announced plans for a counter attack on the governor and his court of military inquiry.

Aroused by his arrest on a charge of rioting and flogging, Jewett, supreme klansman of the realm of Oklahoma, declared that he would use the same guns against his enemies as they have trained on him.

That he contemplates bringing both criminal and civil libel proceedings against the governor, Dr. A. A. Maupin, who testified against him at the court of military inquiry, "and others who have defamed my character," was his direct intimation. "I shall insist upon full vindication of my character," Jewett asserted.

There was some doubt in the minds of a number today as to whether the "lawless legislators"—as Walton calls them—will be able to muster a quorum in the capitol tomorrow. W. D. McBee, acknowledged leader of the impeachment movement, would not claim more than fifty members of the house were in the city. Fifty-four members are required for a majority, McBee did claim, however, that there would be eighty here when the time arrives for them to go over the hill to the capitol.

Military occupation of the city is to be increased and extended, Governor Walton announced. Mobilization of a considerable number of additional troops has already been ordered in the armories of other cities and the troops will entrain for the capital.

Republican members of the Oklahoma senate agreed that they "would keep hands off" the gubernatorial-legislative war here until assured of the legality of the called meeting of the house of representatives. The senate is composed of 12 Republicans and 33 Democrats.

CAPITULATION ANNOUNCED

German Government Signs Proclamation of Surrender.

PASSIVE RESISTANCE ENDED

Extraordinary Measures Taken All Along the Line to Cope With Any Uprising—Troops Shunted to Points of Vantage and Police Held in Readiness For Any Alarm—Concessions Expected From France.

Berlin, Sept. 25.—Germany has capitulated.

Following extraordinary sessions of the cabinet, mixed with various conferences of officials, industrialists, laborites, bankers and political party leaders, the government signed the proclamation of unconditional surrender.

Under the proclamation the passive resistance in the Ruhr is ordered abandoned without conditions attached, although the government expects concessions from the French in the Ruhr and Rhineland, including resumption of German administration, the release of prisoners and the return of all deported Germans.

The imminence of German surrender has kept the tension at a high pitch. The danger of a "putsch" seemed so real that extraordinary measures to cope with any uprising were taken all along the line.

The minister of defense sent the Bavarian reichswehr contingent (the national guard) to Wurtemberg; ordered the Wurtemberg contingent to Saxony, and sent the Saxon troops to Bavaria. The government believes these locations will break up whatever connections may exist between certain reichswehr formations and secret organizations.

The Saxon contingent, which is regarded as the most dependable for the republic, has been concentrated at Grafenwohr, and Commander-in-Chief Von Seeckt has assured Chancellor Stresemann that the reichswehr will be able to crush any "putsch" either from the right or left.

The Berlin police are held in readiness for any alarm.

Among the important conferences was one occupying many hours in which the cabinet met with representatives of the occupied territory. Hugo Linnies was among those present.

The Stresemann ministry has put it squarely up to Germany's enemies to save her from annihilation for their own profit. Berlin faces the imperialism of Bavaria, and behind its back is the growing menace of the red revolution of despair. Both these anti-Berlin forces have been talking in defiant tones, particularly during the last few days, when Herr Stresemann was preparing the way for his decree putting an end to passive resistance.

No assurance is felt that even the people of the Ruhr will pay any great attention to the Berlin decree. They have no affection for the Berlin government, and they have learned to hate the French more than ever. Although Berlin has surrendered, it yet remains for France to make the Ruhr seizure a profitable economic venture.

Holds Charity the Greatest Moral Force in the World.

Washington, Sept. 25.—President Coolidge, speaking before the annual national convention of the American Red Cross here, declared that charity, such as that distributed by the Red Cross, represents the greatest moral force in the world.

The president added that civilization has not yet reached the state where police, criminal courts and armed forces can be dispensed with. President Coolidge spoke for ten minutes, reviewing the achievements of the Red Cross in alleviating suffering. He summed up with this tribute: "I respect it for what it has done and what it is. I am mindful that its purpose and its origin had its beginnings in the day of Abraham Lincoln. It is representative of the dominant influences of his time. It partakes of his spirit. It shows the way to a larger freedom. Our country, it is secure; no higher commendation, no greater place in history, than to have it correctly said that the Red Cross is truly American."

The executive spoke both as a citizen and president of the Red Cross. He formally called the convention to order. He said civilization is coming to rely more and more upon moral force, adding: "It is because the Red Cross has been a practical application of that principle, that it has been such a tremendous success. It makes its appeal for support directly to the conscience of mankind. It is the voluntary offering of the people themselves."

WHEELER WOULD FIX WHEAT PRICE

Program of "Liberal" Group Placed Before Coolidge.

RELIEF OF FARMERS SOUGHT

Montana Senator Announces That the "Liberal" Program For Legislation Includes Repeal of Esch-Cummins Transportation Act, Fixing Selling Price of Wheat and Recognition of Russia.

Washington, Sept. 25.—The "liberal" group, which will hold the balance of power in the next congress, took the initiative in the movement to force the administration into taking some action to relieve the distressful burdens of the American farmers.

The first step was the presentation of a formal demand to President Coolidge for the immediate summoning of congress in extra session to enact legislation for agricultural relief.

This demand was laid before the president by Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, who advised the president that congress should at once pass a measure fixing the price of wheat, and that immediate recognition should be extended to the existing government of Russia, thereby creating new markets for the farmers' products.

The second step taken by the group to bring about governmental intervention in the agricultural industry was the announcement by Senator Wheeler that a conference of all members of the group in both senate and house will be held here early in November to adopt a program for legislative action in the next congress. The call for the conference is being prepared. Of course, if an extra session of the congress is called the conference of the "liberals" will be called to meet at an earlier date.

Already three "planks" in the liberal program for legislation by congress have been agreed upon, Senator Wheeler said. They are: First, fixing the selling price of wheat; second, repeal of the Esch-Cummins transportation act; third, recognition of Russia.

Explaining these in order, Senator Wheeler pointed out that the government already has established precedents for the wheat price-fixing measure by the enactment of the Esch-Cummins law, which guaranteed a fixed return to the railroad companies upon their investments; also in the post-war adjustments with contractors, who were reimbursed for their outlay upon uncompleted projects.

"The government urged the farmers to plant all their acreage to wheat, just as it encouraged builders to devote their energies to putting up structures for housing various war activities," Senator Wheeler said. "The farmers never got anything for their trouble, but all the others did. Settlements were made by the government with contractors who found themselves with uncompleted jobs on their hands, while the farmers who had responded to the call for the planting of more wheat got nothing. All the government needs to do is to go out and buy one bushel of wheat. This will fix the price and the jobbers and middlemen will have to pay the same price for the wheat they get."

WANTS THE NAMES

District Attorney Calls Head of Stock Exchange Before Grand Jury.

New York, Sept. 25.—District Attorney Banton issued a subpoena calling upon Seymour L. Crowell, president of the New York stock exchange, to go before the grand jury to name the big politicians and public officers who, he says, tried to influence the exchange in favor of bucketshop operators. Mr. Banton's action came after he had read a speech delivered by Mr. Crowell before the convention of the American Bankers' association in Atlantic City. In his speech Mr. Crowell cited certain situations in which public officials had intervened in favor of bucketsters, and declared that henceforth full publicity would be given such acts.

See Famine in Women's Hats. Paris, Sept. 25.—A famine in women's hats faces Paris for this winter, according to Milliner Lewis, whose employes walked out in company with all the other milliners of Paris. "The milliners can not afford to pay the increases demanded by their employes," said Lewis, "while the girls, who number more than 700, say they will not return to work without an increase."

France Must Act to Save Germany From Revolution.

Washington, Sept. 25.—Germany will topple into a chaos of revolution unless France acts immediately and with some leniency.

Such was the reaction here to the news from Berlin that the German government had decreed the end of passive resistance in the Ruhr basin. Those most intimately in touch with European conditions were obviously anxious as to what would happen next in Germany. Chancellor Stresemann, it is recognized, has been carefully preparing the German people for the decree which meant unconditional surrender to France, but the reaction, according to reports from abroad, has been fraught with indications of danger.

Despite the uncompromising pronouncements emanating from French sources, the hope persists here that Premier Poincare and his associates have given Chancellor Stresemann reason to believe France will make certain concessions immediately upon the cessation of passive resistance. Unless concessions are made at once, it is felt the Stresemann ministry is doomed.

Ford Request Refused.

Washington, Sept. 25.—Secretary of War Weeks announced the sale of the Gorgas plant and other government improvements on the land of the Alabama Power company at Muscle Shoals to the Alabama Power company at an agreed upon sales price of $3,472,485. The Alabama Power company signified its final refusal to extend its option on the property to Nov. 1, as was requested by Henry Ford in a telegram to Secretary Weeks.

JOHNSON AIRS VIEWS

Says Great World War Taught European Diplomats Nothing.

Los Angeles, Sept. 25.—Senator Johnson discussed international affairs here. He said: "Foreign offices in Europe control its destiny and the same influences control foreign offices that have brought so often disastrous wars. The great world war taught them nothing. To become a partner of those whose views are so dissimilar to ours would put us in a war-breeding, war-making partnership. Seven different conflicts have been unchecked by the league of nations. Greece and Turkey fought a bloody war backed by the two most powerful members of the league, and neither the league nor the court intervened. Whatever there was of the moribund league and the league court was shot up the other day by Mussolini, and the conference of ambassadors, that is, the foreign offices of the great powers, went on in the same old European way."

Hotel Stenographer

BY ROE FULKERSON

"Did you see that dame?" asked the House Detective excitedly.

"Yeah," said the Hotel Stenographer. "I saw you tip your lid to her. She asked me yesterday if you was married."

"Did you tell her?" asked the House Detective.

"Yes, Kelly," replied the girl. "I told her you were married and she said she was sorry for the woman, even if she didn't know her personally."

"I guess you've been trying to flirt! Kelly, there are women in the world who take it as a compliment when a strange man wants to flirt with them. But those few are not worth flirting with."

"When a guy your age tries to flirt with a woman, all she thinks about is being sorry for his wife. Any time you throw out your chest and give some skirt the merry eye, you insult your wife and the woman knows it."

"If she falls for you and you send her candy and flowers, it's a sign she isn't worth sending flowers to. A lot of men think there is no more use sending flowers to a wife than to feed cheese to a mouse already caught. If the average married man spent as much time flirting with his own wife as he spends flirting with strange women, he would get a lot more return for his effort."

"It isn't much of a trick to get married these days. The real cat's whiskers is to stay that way. Still, I suppose if you said the nice things to your own wife that you say to other dames around the hotel she would think you had been sampling some of the evidence you had gathered against the bootleggers who do such a profitable business."

"A mighty sensible woman!" The House Detective nodded his head in approval.

Aborigines a Roman Term.
"Aborigines" was the name which the Romans applied to a tribe which they found in Latium. Assuming that that tribe had been there since the beginning ("ab," from, and "origine," beginning) the old Romans called those people literally "From the Beginning," says the Detroit News. When English-speaking persons and communities came in contact with peoples who had been in a given territory before they arrived there, they applied to them the same name, speaking generally.

Kills and Cures.

Cocaine, which is filling our jails and making the tooth extraction almost pleasant, comes from the coca plant, whose dried leaves South American Indians carry about with them in little bags. These leaves are chewed much as we use tobacco, when they are on journeys, and are extremely sustaining. Cocaine taken in this form is harmless, and if people would be content to chew the dried coca leaves instead of taking the concentrated form of the drug, no harm would be done.

TURN TO RIGHT STANDARD SIGNAL

This gentleman, an official of the American Automobile association, would "turn to the right" as indicated by the raised hand. This official of the A. A. A. is demonstrating on Washington streets the various standard signals which should be universally observed the country over.

RIGHT ESTIMATE OF STEEP GRADE

Not One Driver in Hundred Has Proper Calculation of Inclination of Road.

(By ERWIN GREER, President of Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.)

"How steep is the grade on that road? Well, I should say that it is all of 30 or 35 per cent. But I didn't have any trouble in making it with my car. No sir. She pulled it like a house afire. Made it on high all the way. Passed two cars laboring along in second."

Has Not Proper Estimate.

How often, with variations, do we hear these words from drivers proud of the achievements of their cars frequently to the disparagement of higher-priced cars from which, presumably, a better performance should be expected. After listening to statements of this kind from hundreds of tourists anxious to tell of their trips and the remarkable exploits of their cars, one is at least convinced that not one man in a hundred has the proper estimate of the percentage of a grade encountered. No reliance is to be placed on such estimates expressed by any other than one who knows from actual measurements with a gradometer.

Approaching an ascent the grade naturally appears steeper than it actually is. This, coupled with the performance of the individual car, which may or may not make the grade in high gear gives rise to an incorrect estimate of the percentage of the grade.

Many motorists do not understand the process by which the designation of a grade percentage is arrived at, believing that a 20 per cent grade, for instance, is one which rises at an angle of 20 degrees from the horizontal. This is erroneous.

How to Find Percentage.

The designation of 20 per cent to a grade means that in the grade there is a perpendicular rise of 20 feet in 100 horizontal feet. In other words, to generalize the numerical percentage of a grade indicates that number of feet perpendicular rise in 100 horizontal feet. In relation to degrees it will be found that a grade percentage properly arrived at in this way forms an angle equal to about one-half of the angle formed when the numerical expression is taken to mean degrees. Definitely, a 30 per cent grade is about one-half as steep as the grade formed by a 30-degree angle from the horizontal.

The steepest grade on which a car can obtain traction is 45 per cent, and this is a very stiff grade, indeed. You can be reasonably certain that if you have estimated a grade as 30 or 35 per cent and your car pulls it in high gear that your estimate of the road's steepness is probably double or even more than it actually is.

Stunt Is Simply to Turn Head to One Side and Watch Road With Eyes on Surface.

There is a way to remedy that neck and head strain that comes from the see-sawing of a car over a rough road. The stunt is simply to turn the head to one side and watch the road with the eyes on an angle to its surface. If the head is held up straight the motion of the car will keep jerking it back and forth, resulting in a sort of neck strain that is very tiresome. It is not recommended that the head be turned to one side constantly, but only as a relief from strain.

CAUSE OF IRREGULAR FIRING

Trouble Made by Defective Contact Point or Improper Movement of Interrupter.

The usual timer trouble, causing irregular firing of an engine, is defective contact point or improper movement of the interrupter. Sometimes the small arm bearing one of the points which opens and closes the electric circuit becomes dry at its hinging point and will not work freely or fast enough, and sometimes sticks altogether in the open position.

MEANS OF STARTING CAR ON LOW BATTERY

Method of Short Circuiting to Reduce Resistance.

If one cell of the storage battery is out of commission, the starter cannot be operated and the engine may be difficult to start because the internal resistance of the dead cell may be so great that it does not allow sufficient current to pass to produce a spark at the plugs when the engine is cranked by hand. The resistance of the dead cell may be overcome and the full current of the remaining cells made available if, after the cell at fault is located, a wrench or other piece of metal is held firmly in contact with the posts of the cell.

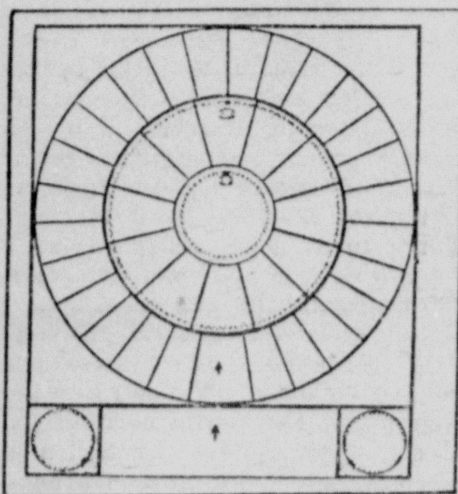

After the engine starts, the wrench may be removed because the generator will supply the current for ignition if the engine is kept running fast enough. Care should be taken to use this expedient only on a cell that is dead, as an active cell would be injured by the short circuit. The dead cell may be quickly found by using a hydrometer or voltmeter.

If the current is still insufficient to produce a satisfactory spark and the engine does not start, the resistance in the circuit to the spark coil may be further reduced by placing a shunt around the resistance coil usually found on the top of spark coils. This shunt may be of copper wire and need not be securely connected since it is advisable to remove it, or at least disconnect one end after the engine starts.

a garage, or for storage purposes. The object is to construct a building in such a manner that space heretofore wasted will be used to the fullest extent and that vehicles stored therein will be readily available and that backing will be practically eliminated, the vehicles after entering the building being placed upon a turntable and brought in direct contact with the compartment to be occupied.

Bamboo Poles as Water Jugs.

I took notes while we were at Epa of a rather curious method of drawing water from the communal spring, half a mile from the village. Twice a day the women went down in chattering groups to the spring, carrying bamboo pipes twelve feet long. These pipes are made by forcing out the pith at the joints, and held about five gallons apiece. When full, the drinking end was plugged with leaves, the pipe being stood in a shady spot near its owner's house and used when needed. Incidentally, drinking from these weird receptacles was a rather hazardous business, care being necessary lest a too copious supply should gush out when the pipe was held to the mouth. —H. C. Pratt in Wide World.

Ancient Greeks Played Ball?

An ancient Greek sculptured relief recently discovered in Athens, according to the London Times, gives evidence that the Greeks played ball games other than with the hand. The relief represents six naked youths taking part in a game bearing every resemblance to modern hockey. The curved stick used may possibly supply an explanation of the singular objects carved in relief on some of the votive offerings found at Sparta. These have been called "stickles." It is difficult to say why this implement should have been dedicated to Artemis, but the word "stickle" may have been the current slang for a boy's hockey stick.

Galapagos Islands.

The Galapagos islands lie under the equator off the coast of Ecuador. The air is frequently chilly, due to the cold antarctic currents which fan the coast of Peru and strike seaward toward the island group. Wild goats, cattle, cats and dogs, as well as hidden treasure, bear evidence of pirates. The soil is rich, fertile loam, nearly stoneless. There are but 3,500 head of cattle at present on Cristobal island and it can easily support 50,000. It is said that a three-year-old steer brings $100 (gold) live weight, at Guayaquil on the mainland—when a steamer can be induced to call and take the stock off.

Queer Uses for Coal.

Coal has been found to have many unexpected uses. Cheap white celluloid combs and fasteners, decorated with insets of "black diamonds," have a great fascination for the dusky beauties of the Congo, where they are used by traders for the exchange of goods with the natives. A shovelful of coal dross is a familiar sight in many pigsties. The coal grit is a valuable aid to digestion and reduces food costs. Miners do a profitable business in carving coal signet rings and ornaments, the finished article having the appearance of ebony; they are popular as souvenirs of mining regions.

HARTMAN THEATER

Here is an opportunity not to be overlooked, George M. Cohan, the "Yankee Doodle Boy" author and producer of more great successes than any one genius of the theater in the world has a brand new one that is to be presented at the Hartman theater in Columbus the week of Monday, September 24.

His new production, which is to be seen in Columbus before sophisticated Broadway gets a glimpse of it, is "The Song and Dance Man" and George M. Cohan wrote it especially for his new star, Lynne Overman. It is safe to say that George has "put another winner across the plate" and Hartman patrons are among the very first to see it.

It is said that Cohan had the idea suggested by the title in mind for some time and originally expected to play in it himself, but decided that Lynne Overman could better carry the character. Before he wrote a line of the script he engaged his full cast of players to support Overman with the result that, each part is particularly adapted to the individual player engaged.

Much can be expected, therefore, from such sterling people as Overman, Frederick Perry, Will Deming, Louis Calhern, Robert Cummings, Eleanor Woodruff, Maye Methot, Laura Bennett and others.

The story of "The Song and Dance Man" is said to be unique in its style and plot. Mr. Cohan characterizes it as "an American comedy, but in keeping with the usual Cohan policy the doughty little producer does not wish to divulge the nature of the plot preferring to spring a complete surprise on his friends and admirers.

Mail orders should be sent to the Hartman boxoffice at once as the demand for reservations promises to be heavy. A Cohan offering is always an event of much note and in view of the fact that Columbus is to see it first even before the New York premiere the interest therein is of double intensity.

The engagement is for an entire week with the usual matinees.

APPAREL FOR WOMEN

New Coat Dresses Arrive With Fall

With the Outfit Fills Gap Between Seasons; Complete in Itself.

The coat dress is new—new as a matter of pertinent style. Some women have known for many seasons that the coat dress would help out their wardrobe most remarkably. But now the majority of women seem to have incorporated the idea into their scheme of dressing. If you buy a coat dress now or one or two months hence, advises a fashion authority in the New York Times, you will be doing the thing that is being generally done, and all through the season you will be glad that you made your decision to buy a costume of this sort.

The coat dress combines the attributes of the coat and the dress in the most remarkable manner. It serves a purpose that is indispensable in the matter of a woman's wardrobe and it fills a gap between one well marked season and the next one with a certainty of style that is not to be disregarded.

The coat dress is something which is complete in itself and as it stands. It needs no coat to carry out its scheme of street effectiveness. With a hat that is smart and that purports to carry out the lines of the design of the frock it becomes a most becoming sort of dress and one that every woman will welcome as a part of the clothes that she considers necessary for the beginning and carry through of a new season.

One of the advantages of a coat dress is the ease with which it is put on. There is usually one hook, and that generally at the side of the lowered waistline. At that point there is usually applied some sort of an ornamental buckle, and in very many instances that is the one spot of anything that might be called trimming on the entire gown.

The design of the coat dress is something that, while it is simplicity incarnate, still expresses one's individuality. It is straight and plain and uncompromising in all of its essentials, and at the same time it involves so many subtleties that it is sure to intrigue the woman who knows what good dressing means.

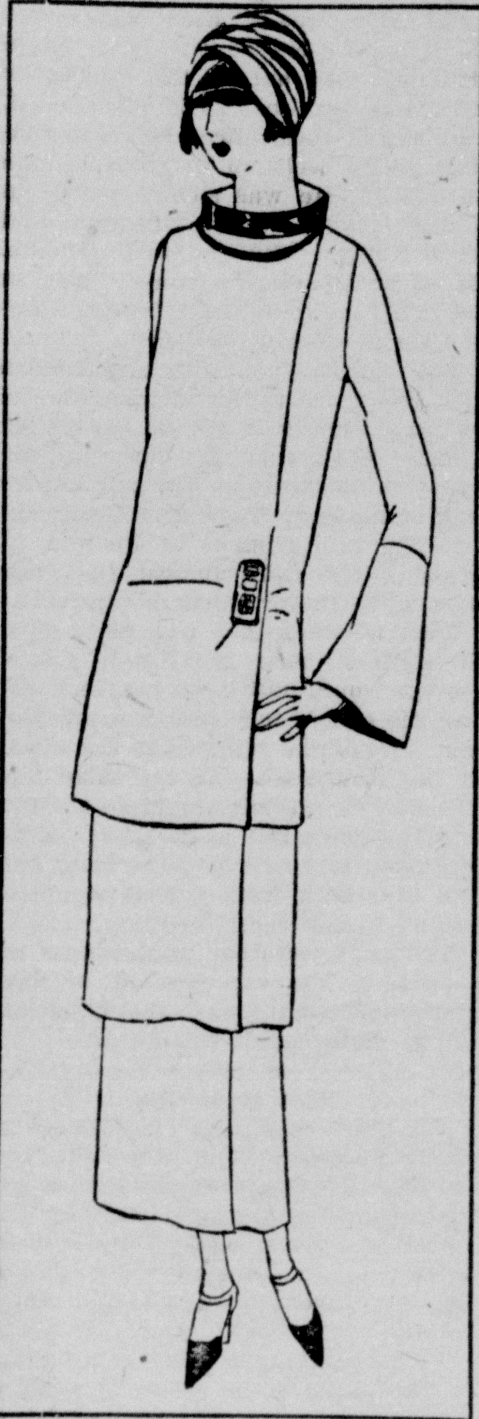

A Pleasing Combination.

To begin with, the coat dress is a happy combination of the severely tailored suit and the dressmaker's dress, as the prevalent costume is sometimes designated. It strikes that distance between the new and the old with a subtlety and art that will appeal to every woman who hates to strike too squarely into a new manner of dressing. She may have become tired of the old overblouse and skirt, she may not be ready to accept with alacrity the tailored suit which is offered her as the season's last word in style. Well, then, for her there is the coat dress.

corset or something that in some way manages to hold in the hips and give them some semblance of studied shape. There has been too much of the uncorseted figure that slops about and has its own way regardless of the lines of dresses.

The Modern Corsets.

Some of the modern corsets are no more than bands of elastic bound about the hips. These are for the very slim of stature and they certainly do help, and this is especially true with the sort of frock in question, to give trim effect to the ultimate appearance and a street appearance, which even the young and beautiful cannot afford to disregard.

When it comes to women of more stately lines, there will be found corsets that mold the form most subtly to the lines that are established by the modern tailors and dressmakers. They have taken all this into account, and while they cannot guarantee, in any sense, to give a smart appearance in a coat dress or a suit to the uncorseted figure, they certainly can and do put their stamp of smartness in dressing upon the woman who comes to them corseted in accordance with the modern mode.

In this respect, as in many others, the wishes of the modern woman are paramount. Dressmakers respect her wish to be comfortable and easy in her dress through all the hours of the day. They do not wish anything confining in the way of corsets upon her, but they do insist that, in order that she shall be well dressed, she shall wear the proper sort of corset suited in the last line to the individual demands of her own figure.

Plainness over the hips (and this is characteristic in the extreme of the modern coat dress) and the straightness of the lines of the skirt, depends supremely upon the foundation of the figure's construction to make the costume a perfect thing to see.

Express Individuality.

Coat dresses are indicative of the modern mode, each one expressing some individual idea. You can see that they follow the same principle of hooking at the side and that their skirts, if they are not trimmed, are draped so that some line of divergence is given to the costume in that particular.

There is the surplice style, which will make its appeal to a large majority of women, and then there is the design that closes in a straight line clear to the neck, giving that straight and one-piece look to which so many women of the modern day are wedded. It all depends upon your figure and your particular appreciation of style which one of these frocks you will choose for your own, but you will be making a great mistake if you do not have something of the sort as an adjunct to your winter wardrobe, for you will find that, as the season progresses, you will wish more and more to have something of the sort to call your own.

These dresses, and many more that go to make up the modern styles, are statuesque in appearance. They are built along straight and uncompromising and architectural lines. They are essentially street things in their very appearance, and the art that has gone into their construction is everywhere quite evident.

Plaid Tweed in Two Shades of Gray Is Used for This Smart Coat Dress, Which Has Edging of Red Leather on Surplice Collar and Sleeves.

with all its grace and charm and with the tailored lines still kept intact, and with that dressiness for street wear carried out to the last degree of perfection.

Of course, there are many things to be considered when it comes to the adoption of the street dress as one's style for the season. One coat dress, you know, will go a great way in the establishment of a wardrobe that lives up to modern fashion dictates. First, there is the corset, for no woman looks really well in a frock of this sort unless her figure is properly corseted. The lines of the coat dress are too severely straight and plain to allow of its being worn over an uncorseted figure and, whether the corset is inconsiderable or not, it must still be a

Botanical Expert Describes Strange Power of Locomotion in Some Flora.

The animal kingdom and the plant kingdom have been thought of as separate worlds, but science is finding many connecting bridges. Dr. Fred J. Seaver of the New York Botanical garden staff, in a recent lecture said that it has now become absolutely impossible to separate the lower animals from the lower plants.

We think of the plant as stationary, while the animal is able to move about, but many of the lower plants, such as the diatoms, swim about in the water, while many of the lower animals are fixed, he pointed out.

Going higher in the scale than the humble diatoms, we find plants adopting the fixed habit, said the lecturer, while animals developed to a high degree the power of locomotion. This, together with the fact that animals were largely dependent upon plants for food, had apparently resulted in many modifications of structure on the part of either the animal or the plant, or both.

Since higher plants were for the most part stationary, while animals were motive, it was necessary for the plant, generally speaking, to carry on a defensive warfare to keep from being destroyed by its hungry enemies. Many plants, especially the desert plants, had developed protective armaments of spines or thorns. Just how these devices originated, said Doctor Seaver, it was now difficult to say, but that they served their purpose could not be denied.

Again, since higher plants were unable to move about, many ingenious arrangements had been perfected for making use of the locomotory powers of animals for performing some of the necessary functions of plants. The plants used the locomotory powers of insects and other animals mainly in the pollination of their flowers and for the distribution of their seeds. The appeal was usually made to the animal's desire for food, which was offered as bait. In securing the desired food, the animal was made to serve the plant. Brilliantly colored flowers acted as signals, while the nectar which they contained was offered as recompense for the assistance rendered.

TO CRAWL 100 MILES ON ONE KNEE AND EAT DOG

Dr. J. T. House, professor of literature at the Nebraska State Normal school, who is to "go into the primeval" with a 100-mile crawl on his hands and one knee—the other being so tied up that he cannot use it. While on the trip he will live on berries, roots, field mice, and "etc"—the "etc" to include a dog which the professor will kill, cook in its own skin, and then eat. There is no bet connected—Professor House merely wants to prove he can duplicate the feat of Hugh Glass, a famous old trapper who was forced to crawl 100 miles on one knee, after his leg had been broken in a fight with a grizzly bear and he had been left for dead.

PENSIONS GIVEN TO ACTORS

Many in Berlin Supplied With Unemployment Doles.

Several dozen well-known actors and actresses, who accepted jobs with a summer stock company operating the Deutsches theater in Berlin, are now drawing unemployment pensions, as the venture failed and there is no prospect of a new management taking it over.

Under the circumstances these are lucky in being able to qualify for municipal unemployment doles, as numerous colleagues, unable to find summer employment because of the surplus of musical shows and reviews now holding Berlin stages, were forced to engage in various pursuits pending the opening of the fall season.

SUPREME COURT CONVENES

Taft and Albaugh Taxation Controversy to Be Decided Soon.

Columbus, Sept. 25.—Ohio supreme court convened today for the fall term. All members of the court were present with the exception of Judge Thomas A. Jones of Jackson. Judge Jones has been in Europe and is expected to return late this week. The suits instituted by opposing interests in the controversy over the Taft and Albaugh taxation laws, which are under referendum attack, are among the cases to be argued before the court. A decision in these cases is necessary before Ohioans will know whether they are to vote on the laws on Nov. 6. Questions involved in the suit include the status of the two laws with reference to liability to referendum, as well as the validity of the referendum petitions brought against them by the Ohio Association of Real Estate Boards.

Awarded Fourth Place.

Columbus, Sept. 25.—Ohio's state champion live stock team, which won the title at the Ohio state fair, was awarded fourth place in national competition at the Sioux City food and clothing exposition, according to a report received by the Ohio Bankers' association. The state of Minnesota was granted the national championship title, winning over North Dakota, Nebraska, Ohio and seven other states, the report stated.

The great industry James J. Hinde built at Sandusky and other cities, prospered because of liberal wages.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

At the regular meeting of the Monday club this week, about thirty-five members were present. Mrs. W. T. Elm, the president announced "Japan" as the subject for the evening's program. The roll call was responded to with names of Japan's exports. Mrs. Floyd E. Logee read a splendidly prepared paper on "Religious Japan." Mrs. R. B. Bales in her paper on "Industrial Japan" gave much valuable information. Mrs. W. L. Peters and Mrs. Cyrus Abernethy were elected as associate members. Miss Nell Weldon resigned as press correspondent and Miss Carrie Johnson was elected for half the year. The president, at the suggestion of Mrs. Howard Jones, urged the membership to attend the Logan Elm celebration October 7. A motion was made and carried asking for medical inspection of the children in our own public schools; and also give our support to our benevolent society in its efforts to push the inspection. Mrs. D. V. Courtright, Miss Phelps and Miss Nell Weldon are especially interested in this work and doing all they can and trying hard to interest others. They related some terrible conditions of children who need operations for tonsils and adenoids. Committees were appointed to investigate and help relieve conditions if possible.

Announcement is made of the marriage, Saturday, September 22, at 4 o'clock of Miss Zella Willis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Willis, Atlanta, to Mr. Harry K. Armstrong son of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Armstrong of New Holland. The ceremony was performed at the home of Rev. C. H. Borror, pastor of the Methodist church of Linden Heights, Columbus. Mr. and Mrs. Harley Hiser brother-in-law and twin sister of the bride were the attendants. The bride is a graduate of Ohio university normal college, a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority and taught last year in Cleveland. Mr. Armstrong attended Ohio State university and is manager of Liggett's drug store in Evansville, Indiana. Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong are taking a trip east visiting New York, Washington D. C. and Philadelphia before going to Evansville, Indiana, where they will make their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kuhn and guests Mr. and Mrs. Millard Heeter of Ft. Leavenworth, Kansas, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Adkins and family, Samuel Jones, Miss Bertha Jones, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Carter and daughter, Miss Marvene of Kinderhook picnic Sunday in Lancaster at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wilson, East Walnut street.

CHALLENGE.

The Circleville All Stars challenge the Ohio Utilities for a game of ball on October 7 or 14th for the county championship. We have seen by the papers that Ashville has challenged them for a game but are afraid to play them.

They have not played a first class attraction this season and we want to show the ball fans of Circleville that we have a first class ball team.

Nettles That Cause Death.

All species of nettles are unpleasant enough to handle roughly, but some of the foreign ones are most formidable plants. Several of the East Indian forms are truly dangerous, for, after the first itching sensation has passed away, it is often followed by a feeling as if hot irons being rubbed on the flesh, and the pain increases to such an extent that after hours—and sometimes days—the patient is seized with symptoms like those following influenza and lockjaw, while sometimes death results.

If You Fall, She'll Clean It.

The comments made by ladies upon pipes often shows a curious unawareness of the true virtue and function of that soothing implement. Said Titania, when we exhibited our magnificent new briar. "That's lovely! How nice it smells. Now do try to keep it clean."—New York Evening Post.

COAST GUARDS OF ENGLAND

More Than a Thousand Lighthouses and Lightships Under Control of Trinity House.

More than a thousand lighthouses and lightships guard the coasts of the British Isles, and all are under the control, direct or indirect, of Trinity house. For the purpose of control the coast is divided into districts, of which the London district is the most important. It extends from Southwold in Suffolk to the North Foreland in Kent.

The stores for this district are kept at Trinity wharf, at Blackwell, and here are to be seen casks of oil, anchors, mooring chains, complete lanterns and machinery of many sorts, as well as quantities of buoys of different sizes, shapes and colors.

The anchors used for mooring lightships are huge implements of iron shaped like great umbrellas, and as for the mooring chains, these are tested by hydraulic power up to 300 tons. Can buoys, spherical buoys, wreck buoys, bell and gas buoys are here by the score. Some are new; others are old and battered, and have been brought in for painting and repair.

Painting buoys goes on all the year round, and the work is done by the men who are ashore from lightships or lighthouses. Life on a lightship is no joke, especially in bad weather, and each man after two months afloat gets a month ashore.

Since accidents sometimes happen to lightships, a relief ship is always kept moored at the wharf ready to start at a moment's notice to replace any vessel which has drifted from her moorings or been sunk in collision.—London Tit-Bits.

TELLS HOW HE STOLE MELON

Speaker on Honesty Says a Queer Shiver Ran Up His Spine and He Put Fruit Back.

Mr. Moneybags, the English profiteer, has just bought the largest house in the country town, and so he was recognized as the unofficial squire of the place.

He was in great demand as a speaker at all the local functions, and that is how he came to be on the platform at the annual prize-giving, due to give an address on "Honesty."

When his turn came to speak he related how, when quite a boy, he saw a cart of melons outside a shop and nobody in sight.

"On the spur of the moment," he said impressively—"on the spur of the moment, I say, I took one of those melons—"

He paused for effect, and was not disappointed. The whole audience gave one gasp at the idea of their local bigwig doing such a thing. "But," he went on, "instantly a queer sensation assailed me and a shiver went through me. I made up my mind, and I went back to the cart and replaced the melon—(loud applause)—and took a ripper one!"—Pittsburgh Chronicle.

Scientific View of Earth.

A French scientist finds in the great depths of the Arctic ocean an argument tending to show that the earth is slightly topshaped, the protuberance corresponding to the point of the top being at the south pole. This, he thinks, would explain the different results arrived at by the various measurements of astronomers and geodesists.

The differences are very small in comparison with the entire bulk of the globe, yet they are readily appreciable, and one of the explanations that has been suggested for them is that the earth is tetrahedral in form. But the Frenchman thinks the top-shape theory is preferable. The fact that to an eye looking at the earth from a point in space it would not sensibly differ in appearance from a true sphere shows how refined are the methods of science which enable men living on the surface of the globe to detect variations in its general contour.—New York Sun.

Star Four Years Away.

If the light of all the stars were to go out at once, it would be at least four years before we noticed any difference in their light. After that time these lights in the sky would disappear one by one, according to their distance from the earth. No one living today would see the last starlight go out if all their lights were extinguished at once. The nearest star takes four and one half years for its light to come to us. We say a star is so many "light years" away, basing its distance on the time it takes its light to reach us. It takes light 100,000 years and more to reach us from some of the farther stars. From some of the more distant stars we are just now receiving the light that originally emanated from them way back in the Stone Age—before history. It has taken it all these years to reach us.

The Thrifty Partners.

Two Aberdonians, who were keen business men, started on their own account, and it was part of the co-partner agreement, that one of them should do the canvassing for orders in the forenoon, and the other in the afternoon. A customer of the firm entered, and knowing this arrangement, remarked:

"You're late today in going out, Mr. McGregor."

"Yes, you see it's a Tag day in the town today, and I am waiting on my partner returning with his tag. No use of two of us buying the same commodity."

USED BOARDS TO GUIDE CAR

Hero of Desert Automobile Race Won Third Money Owing to His Resourcefulness.

I used to hear a lot about the old Los Angeles-to-Phoenix desert races, which were run in two or three relays, the drivers checking in at all-night stops at the end of each day. These races were run at a season of the year when rain on all or part of the course was not unusual. It took brains, a powerful car and a heavy foot to negotiate that muddy course.

Bill O'Day was my hero in the Phoenix struggle. He wasn't licked unless his motor fell out of the chassis or something else just as bad happened.

In one of these races Bill was running pretty well up in front on the third day. He was sitting pretty, in spite of having wallowed through mud for two days. But bad luck got him. He broke his steering arm—I mean on the car. That would have been the curtain for most drivers.

But old Bill and his mechanic took two fence rails and wired one to the axle on the inside of each front wheel. Then they got into the car, each one holding to the rail on his side of the car. They guided that car into the fair grounds at Phoenix by pressing the rails against the front tires when they wanted to turn.

That is, when they wanted to go to the right the man on the right side of the car would pull in on his fence rail and the end of it would then press on that part of the right front tire ahead of the front axle. At the same time the man on the left would so manipulate his fence rail as to press on the left front wheel behind the front axle and thus both front wheels would be turned in the right direction. The tires were cut to pieces on the sides, but the car finished in third place—and that was the important thing.—Saturday Evening Post.

With Happiness.

We heard a stranger philosophizing about the feverishness of a visit. "One evening it was a ride, the next a trip to the movies, the next dancing, and so on. Always restlessness. We're getting so we can't sit still." Do we deserve Stevenson's advice and indictment:

"We are in such haste to be doing, to be writing, to be gathering gear, to make our voice audible a moment in the derisive silence of eternity, that we forget that one thing, of which these are but the parts—namely, to live. . . . We run to and fro like frightened sheep. And now you are to ask yourself if, when all is done, you would not have been better to sit by the fire at home and be happy thinking. To sit still and contemplate—to remember the faces of women without desire, to be pleased by the great deeds of men without envy, to be everything and everywhere in sympathy, and yet content to remain where and what you are—is not this to know both wisdom and virtue, and to dwell with happiness?"—Collier's.

Probation Precedes Vows.

In most of the Nyasaland tribes, in Africa, permanent connubial life is preceded by a term of probation, which can be broken off at will by either party. When the woman has finally made up her mind to stay, she punctuates her decision by kneeling when she addresses her husband. As a rule, she will inaugurate this change in their relations by a little coup de theater. She will choose an occasion when chance has brought together a goodly number of people, and she sees her husband standing among them. She will then walk right up to him, kneel down before him, put some trivial question, or give some unimportant piece of information, wait for the reply in a kneeling posture, and, after this has been given, get up and join the others. By thus humiliating herself, she has taken possession of her husband.

In some tribes, as, for instance, that of the Wangoni, where probation is not required, the girls will postpone kneeling until after marriage.—Atlantic Monthly.

Giving Meyerbeer a Treat.

Musicians are proverbially jealous of one another; but not all of them can manage to get a smile out of that unfortunate fact, as the gentle and merry-hearted composer Rossini once did. Rossini, who lived most of his life in Paris, was walking one day on the boulevard with his friend Braga. They met the composer Meyerbeer, who stopped and inquired politely after Rossini's health. "It's bad, very bad, my dear Meyerbeer," answered Rossini, "I have a splitting headache, a strange pain in my side and a leg that troubles me constantly." After Meyerbeer had consoled sufficiently he passed on, and Braga asked Rossini how he happened to have become suddenly so unwell. "Oh, I'm well enough," said Rossini with a laugh, "but I wanted to give Meyerbeer a moment's pleasure. He would be so delighted to see me go to pieces!"—Youth's Companion.

How He Knew.

"Changed your brand of shaving soap, haven't you?" asked Uncle Pennywise of the barber. "Yes, suh. Feels smoother?" "No, tastes different."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Fountain of Youth.

"What! You are planning to go to Vienna! But that will cost you a fortune." "Oh, not so much. You see, I'll have my youth restored by Doctor Steinach and come back on a child's ticket."—Laetitia Blatter.

AMUSEMENTS

Proving itself to be a genuinely entertaining production, "The White Flower," a Paramount picture starring Betty Compson, was shown with flattering results at the Met theater last night.

This production is entirely different from "Kick In," in which Miss Compson last appeared. In "The White Flower" she has the role of the young daughter of an American father and a Hawaiian mother. She falls in love with a young American. Just as she begins to be confident that she has won his love, Ethel Granville, his fiancée, arrives from the states and temporarily upsets all her plans.

By an original scheme Konia (Miss Compson) finally fixes everything so that Ethel tells Bob that she cannot possibly marry him. This leaves Bob free, but Konia is not to be won so easily.

Where one would expect the end of the picture it does not come, but the finale comes in a novel manner. The picture exhales the languor and mysticism of the tropics.

Edmund Lowe plays the leading masculine role of Bob Rutherford opposite Miss Compson. The support generally is excellent.

GOVERNOR DONAHEY HERE.

Governor Donahey and a party of three friends came down Sunday afternoon unannounced and tarried a short while in the town and then went down to the Logan Elm park to catch a glimpse of the historical elm tree made famous by the Shawnee Indian chief, Logan. The governor had heard so much about this famous old tree and the history surrounding it, that he wanted to see the monarch of the elm family. He slipped one over on the newspapers in his visit and we learned of it merely by accident.

Rotation to Prevent Disorders of Beans

Hand Pick Disease-Free Pods to Use for Seeding.

Plant beans on the same land not oftener than once in three or four years, particularly if disease has been prevalent. Soils which once become thoroughly infected as a result of continuous cropping are seldom safe to use for the same or closely related crops for years to come.

Wherever practical, destroy all diseased vines and trash by burning. If the bean straw from diseased vines is to be fed, do not use the manure on a field that is to be planted to beans.

As far as possible avoid cultivating the beans early in the morning when there is dew on them, or when they are wet with rain.

Hand pick disease-free pods, or if possible, select disease-free plants for seed. Use these to plant a seed plot on land which has never raised beans, and which is removed some distance from the main crop.

Remember that hand picking of seed as it comes from the flail or thrasher for the purpose of controlling disease is of no value, since it is impossible to detect even a small percentage of diseased seed.

Seed treatment of beans is of no practical value, since any chemical that would penetrate the seed deeply enough to destroy the disease-producing organism would likewise be apt to kill the seed.

Spraying with bordeaux mixture, 5-4-50 formula, even when done thoroughly by competent persons, is at best unsatisfactory, unprofitable and only partially successful.—Walter G. Sackett, Bacteriologist, Colorado Experiment Station.

Find Silage Profitable as Feed for Baby Bees

Recent feeding tests with baby bees at the Minnesota experiment station show that silage can be profitably used in fattening baby bees. In the tests, which were conducted by W. H. Peters and N. K. Carnes, calves getting silage, plus a full feed of grain, fed more regularly and required less skillful and careful feeding than calves getting a heavy feed of grain and no silage.

The silage-fed calves gained 2.36 pounds per head per day as an average of a 196-day feeding period, while the calves fed without silage gained at the rate of 2.22 pounds per head per day. Although the calves fed without silage were valued at 10 cents per hundred pounds above those which had silage, the silage-fed calves showed a net profit of $17.90 per head while those without silage made a profit of $16.15 per head.

In another test barley proved practically equal to corn, pound for pound, in making gains on fattening calves. However, because of the greater cost of the barley and the smaller saving of feed made by hogs following, the corn-fed calves showed a profit of $16.15 per head, while the profit on those fed barley was but $6.91 per head.

Pure bred beef calves, high-grade beef calves and common calves showing some traces of beef breeding made similar gains on similar amounts of feed. The difference in selling price was marked, however, the pure bred bringing $86.78 per head, the grades $83.45 and the common calves only $56.18 per head.

Sheep Raising Spurred by Advance in Prices

"The farmer who has the equipment and feeds at hand should be encouraged in raising lambs," says Phil A. Anderson of the animal husbandry division, University of Minnesota. "But farmers entering this field should go slowly at first and study the requirements very thoroughly," he adds.

Mr. Anderson makes the foregoing statement in view of the greatly increased interest exhibited in sheep production the last few months, which has been brought about by advancing prices for wool, a steady lamb market and good profits made in feeding lambs during 1921-1922.

Stocks of wool, which accumulated during the war and immediately after, have now been converted into merchandise. Manufacturers short of mill supplies and eager to keep the mills going have become anxious to buy, causing the price to go up.

"Prices of lambs have been at $12 to $15 per 100 pounds for a long time, with a variation of $2 to $2.50 for short lambs," says Professor Anderson. Such prices should be an inducement for many farmers to have flocks of 25 to 35 ewes or more which will consume green food perhaps otherwise wasted and convert it into a marketable product. With wool and market stock high in price, because of a decrease in the number of sheep in the United States and the action of the new protective tariff, our sheep breeders can surely compete with the breeders of other countries."

Overcrowding Chickens Is Quite Unprofitable

In culling the flock it is better to cull severely and save just enough birds to fill the laying houses to their capacity. Overcrowding never pays, as it cuts down egg production and increases the chances of disease. It is very difficult to keep the straw litter clean and dry in a poultry house that is overcrowded.

Leader Feels His Power Gone.

In full health a stag is always proud of his ability as leader and champion, and waves his gleaming flag incessantly, signaling to his family that way. Hit him with a bullet, and down goes his flag instantly. He will save himself if he can. But he does not wave on the others to follow him. Scatter and save yourselves, he would say.

Always on these days when I have the most tiring work, she picks out her nicest pieces, like 'Sweet Rest By-and-By,' 'Mother's Growing Old,' 'Love Will Roll the Clouds Away,' and sings them for me while I'm running the clothes through the first water. A LETTER
 (©, 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

TUESDAY—a very reminiscent evening.

Lora, dear: I meant to have answered your vivacious letter a bit earlier, but I am always so tired when my day's work in the cotton mill is over that it seems I haven't fortitude enough to face another day—another day of drudgery in the mill. I am pleased to hear that you and your husband had such a delightful trip to the gold mining districts of Nevada.

My boy is about as usual—capable and ambitious; but he had little opportunity here. Hence he was anxious to leave Huntsville; and, what is more, Alabama, where you spent your girlhood, and I my life. Lora, can you, my girlhood friend, guess—feel what that meant to me at the sunset of my life?

But he had to go—and I let him go without a murmur, for there was a girl, a nice, sweet little girl with dreamy, sparkling blue eyes. And he had to make his way for her, Lora, for she was and is his incentive—his inspiration. Don't think for one fraction of a second, dear friend, that I entertain any bitter feeling toward my boy. On the contrary, he has a mother's blessings.

Thoughts of my boy's absence bring back memories tonight—memories of a twilight melting summer day, when the softness of noon hid itself between the blazing, scorching rays of sunset. It was just a few evenings after Larry had left me and our boy to sleep in the Great Beyond, and the birth of each morning still found me seeking his face—aching for a sound of his voice—that a dear little old lady stood in my doorway. Months later she told me that she hailed from the North.

"I have come to help you a bit and take care of your boy while you work," said Aunt Matilda, as my boy and I learned to call her later. "I," she continued, "have learned that you've been left a widow and must go to work, and so I thought perhaps you'd rather let me take care of your boy while you worked rather than place him in a home. Won't you let me stay?" she pleaded.

Lora, my heart wept for her. She was sixty if she was a day. She took off her shabby black silk hat as I led her into my front room, revealing the whitest hair I have ever laid eyes upon. Her oval face was pink, clear and animated; her soft brown eyes told a tale of sorrow which her nicely-formed, rosy lips, that showed firmness and quick decision, didn't disclose. And then and there, Lora, I resolved that if I could earn but one piece of bread a day she would share it with my boy and me. And how she worshiped, idolized my boy! And yet not once did she tell me of her past life. It was a closed book.

Eighteen years passed. Aunt Matilda was overtaxed. Every day she had worked beyond her years caring for my boy and home. My boy grew to manhood. He was like the dawn of day—hopeful and confident. It was a hard struggle for me to send him to college, but he went, and came back ready and willing to shoulder my responsibilities. And then came the girl—she is my daughter now.

It was just about the time Aunt Matilda became ill—a few months before she passed on. How intently she watched and questioned my face as I sat by her bedside. Once she said to me: "Virginia, my daughter, you won't stand in your boy's way, will you?"

Stand in his way—never! I thought—at least, not while the story that Larry had told me of his mother—how she refused to recognize him as a son when she learned of me—rang in my ears. Oh, the anguish of my heart when Aunt Matilda spoke to me thus. Lora, for I knew that the harsh words of Larry's mother contributed to his death, for after he came South with me he lost trace of her.

Not long after this incident Aunt Matilda fell into that peaceful slumber that knows no rude awakening. And thus the little lady that had shared my years of toil lay serene and calm.

I reflected that Larry was gone, and now Aunt Matilda, and soon my boy would be gone—and that girl was taking him away from me—his mother, Lora! Heaven alone knew how my soul rebelled—how I hated, hated that girl then. And yet I knew that if I said one word to my boy he would give her up and not go North. Weeks before I had decided not to accompany them.

And then I knelt down and prayed near the coffin, and as I did so my eyes scanned a locket, about the size of a half dollar, around Aunt Matilda's throat. She had told me to take it from her when she died and to open it.

I did as she had bade me, dear friend, and then I saw light—she had shown me the way—the way to let my boy go and to love his girl as my daughter.

Lora, I now know why she called me daughter. And evening after evening as I sit alone dreaming—well, just dreaming of Larry and my boy, my thoughts creep back to Aunt Matilda. How I miss her!

The locket lies on the table as I write to you now. What supreme happiness it gives me to open it and look at Larry's picture, taken shortly before our marriage!

You know, dear friend, Aunt Matilda was Larry's mother—my boy's grandmother.

May she be granted a place in heaven! Reminiscently, your friend,

Bees Do Queer Things.
 An automobile collision threw one of the vehicles and its occupants over a bank into a hive of bees. The latter not only prevented rescue work but attacked the injured persons who were held helpless in the wreckage. A swarm of bees caused a hold-up in St. James' road, Kingston-on-Thames, England. Thousands of bees in a big cluster hung from the branch of a tree at a height level with the faces of passers-by, and a policeman mounted guard. Finally two local bee-keepers were found and they hived the swarm.

RELIC OF BURIAL CUSTOM

It was once the curious custom in England to carry wax effigies of the dead—if they were distinguished enough—in their funeral processions. It was also customary to leave the effigies near the grave for some time thereafter, and the mourning friends of the deceased were used to compose elegies, rhymed laments and similar productions, which they would write fairly out on paper and pin to the clothing of the effigy. A number of the quaint old effigies are still preserved at Westminster abbey, where they are stored in the Islop chapel, and one at least, that of Frances, Duchess of Richmond, is still to be seen beside her grave in Henry VII's chapel.

The fair duchess was something of a figure at the court of Charles II, and she was for some years a particular favorite of the merry monarch. Her effigy at Westminster is magnificently dressed in the robes she wore on some great occasion—the coronation perhaps of Queen Anne—and beside it on its perch is the stuffed body of her grace's pet parrot. It is a strange thing to be seen in this last resting place of the great and famous. Doubtless it is the only creature not human on whom such distinction has been conferred. The story goes that the parrot died of grief within a few days of its mistress, and that it was carried in her funeral procession on account of her great affection for it. How it happened to be left in the abbey and why it has never been dispossessed of its place there no one seems to know. It has been there so long now, watching like Tut-Ankh-Amen's two guardian statues over the last slumbers of its fair mistress, that it may fairly be thought to have established a prescriptive right to its post of honor.—From Youth's Companion.

INDEFINITE

"So you are to meet your wife here? Have you long to wait?"
"Only until she arrives."

Patron of Navigation.

Between seventeen and eighteen hundred years ago there was a very holy bishop in Italy named Elmo. He was canonized not long after his death, and became very popular among the sailors on the Mediterranean, especially during storms. Eventually he was known as the special patron of navigation.

His name lives nowadays chiefly because of an electrical appearance called St. Elmo's Fire, or St. Elmo's Light. This is either a ball of fire or a brush or star of light, sometimes seen, especially in southern climates, during thunderstorms, at the tops of masts, spires or other pointed objects. It is often accompanied by a rushing, hissing noise, and is of the same nature as the light caused by electricity streaming from points connected with an electrical machine.

The Waiter's Gibe.

General Pershing said at an American Legion banquet in New Orleans: "Since the war we are all great French scholars. You remember, of course, the doughboy in the French restaurant who ordered a certain item on the menu only to be told by the waiter:

"'Sorry, monsieur, but the band is playing that.'

"Another doughboy said in a brasserie:

"'A cafe-au-lait, please, without milk.'

"'Yes, sir,' said the waiter. 'And will you have tea or coffee in it, sir?'

He Knew the Doctor.

A certain celebrated doctor hated to pay his bills, and got out of doing so whenever he could. One day the doctor employed a workman to mend some pavement just outside of his house. Afterward he exclaimed:

"Why, you rascal! Do you expect to be paid for such a piece of work? Why you have spoiled my pavement and then covered it over with earth to hide the bad work!"

The workman winked knowingly. "Doctor," he retorted slyly, "mine is not the only bad work the earth hides."

Lightning Passed Through Building. During a storm at Norwich, Eng., lightning struck the chimney of the local Young Men's Christian association premises. A man reading in one room saw it pass out in a ball of blue flame and noticed a smell of burning. No damage, however, was done.

Cabbage Had Double Life.

A reader says she left a quarter of a cabbage on the kitchen table early in the winter; in a few days new green leaves began to sprout and now the cabbage is quite large and seems to have seed coming on.

REV. J. A. DUNKEL

Passenger on Train When Engine Comes to Sudden Stop—No One Injured.

Rev. J. A. Dunkel, minister in charge of the Tabernacle Presbyterian church, Indianapolis, Indiana, who is here on a visit to his sister, Mrs. W. H. Lathouse, of Watt street, had the experience of his life Monday afternoon. He was coming east over the Pennsylvania railroad, when the engine drawing his train stopped suddenly near London. The passengers were thrown from their seats but no one was injured. Rev. Dunkel was in the dining car and he was just about to take a sip of coffee when the sudden shock emptied the contents on his shirt front. The sudden stoppage was caused by a water cock blowing off causing the train's automatic air device to go bad. Another engine ordered from Columbus pulled the train in just before reaching Columbus. The same train collided with a five ton gravel truck eight miles west of Columbus. The driver of the truck escaped injury. The truck was a mass of ruins.

Rev. Dunkel is on his way to Atlantic City, New Jersey, to attend the general council of the Presbyterian church, which meets at the Hotel Chalfant. From there he goes to New York City to attend a meeting of four boards; The Foreign and Home Missions, Executive and Ministerial Relief and the Sustentation.

"The Store That Treats You Right"

Button, Button,
Who's got the Button?

The answer is—Colwell & Katz have them all

Fall suits in one, two, three and four button models—and if buttons have never counted for much in your style calculation you'll be glad to know this—

Buttons and button spacings can build you up or whittle you down—they can make you appear shorter, taller, leaner or larger.

This discovery was made in the designing rooms of Kuppenheimer and instantly on seeing the difference a few buttons make we ran the gauntlet and stocked them all.

Come in—try on a two button model we call the "Belmore Jr.," and note the difference in our four button "Cameron."

It is the little things that make up this beautiful line of suits—little prices included.
